PICK DETROYAT TO WIN AIR DERBY

WINGS OVER LOS ANGELES

SET NEW MARK AT STATE FAIR

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 7.—Livestock judging was started in cattle and horse barns today at California's 82nd state fair moved into its third day with every indication that all previous attendance records would be broken.

Based on their estimates on increases the first two days, officials expected 50,000 persons to jam the grounds, racetrack grandstands and horse show pavilion today. Nearly 50,000 attended the opening day, and approximately 75,000 were at the fair yesterday to set new records for the first two days.

A program of harness and running races provided the entertainment feature for the Labor day throngs. Yesterday, the American Legion turned the fair into a pageant of drill contests. San Jose Red Devils, Fresno, Chico, Berkeley and Sunset 400 of San Francisco, winning the first five places.

Increased interest in the fair was indicated in the livestock division where nine outside states, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Oregon, Washington and Iowa, entered exhibits.

Santa Cruz and Alameda counties portrayed their usual rivalry in flower displays, Santa Cruz winning the first daily flower award with its display of carnations. Alameda was second.

The first gold medal in the dairy division was awarded to D. Ragul, Point Reyes Cooperative Creamery association, for the best creamery butter exhibited. Other gold medal dairy awards: Cheddar cheese, Hugh Barber, Tillamook, Ore.; granular cheese, New Sonoma creamery, San Francisco; cottage cheese, Hjalmar Sandberg, Fresno; Monterey cheese, W. M. Rivers, Knudsen Creamery company, Visalia; Mysost cheese, and Roquefort cheese, Mt. Lassen Goat dairy, Inwood.

PLANES BOMB IRON, ESCAPE OVER BORDER

Revolutionary Forces Are Driven Back After Fight
at Talavera la Reina

BULLETIN
LONDON, Sept. 7.—(UP)—The British foreign office today instructed Sir Henry Chilton, ambassador to Spain, to consult with his diplomatic colleagues at Hendaye about a joint warning to the Spanish rebels against the use of poison gas in their war against government forces.

HENDAYE, Sept. 7.—(UP)—The government forces struck back viciously today at the rebel bombers of iron dropping bombs on the flame-charged city. Loyalist planes dived over the city, dropped seven heavy bombs, then fled to safety over the French frontier to escape insurgent pursuit planes.

Meanwhile, the rebels, victorious in the Iron sector, continued their concentration of troops around San Sebastian, key to the entire northwestern coastal section. Their guns were throwing shell after shell into Pasajes where government forces sought to keep them from their goal.

The fury of the rebels was increased by their failure to find any trace of their 200 colleagues who had been held as hostages in Fort Guadalupe, on the outskirts of Iron.

Government troops had threatened.

HOLD TRIO IN LUST SLAYING

LA JOLLA, Cal., Sept. 7.—(UP)—Three men—a cook, a Negro transient and a hitch-hiker—were held today for questioning as possible suspects in the sex slaying of Ruth Muir, Riverside, Cal., Y.W.C.A. worker, a week ago.

The cook, John Piramonte, 42, was taken in custody in Los Angeles and held in county jail there after he reportedly attempted to flee following an automobile accident because he didn't want "anything to do with police."

Police reported Piramonte had several hairpins in his pockets and was unable to account for his activities during the past week. He was booked temporarily on a vagrancy charge.

In Riverside, Fred Wurdun, hitch-hiker, was taken into custody by Undersheriff Steve Lynch for questioning. Wurdun assertedly was taken into custody once by Deputy Sheriff Walter Sibley on the outskirts of the city but escaped after slugging the officer. He was recaptured.

The Negro, Henry Reed, 22, was held here, his arrest following a two-day search for him. Reed reportedly had been hiding near the beach where Miss Muir was beaten to death. The Negro had been convicted on a vagrancy charge last week but was released on a 90-day suspended sentence. Police sought him for further questioning.

ECONOMIC DEMOCRACY URGED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT IN RADIO MESSAGE TO WORKERS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—(UP)—A nation celebrating Labor's annual fête was confronted today by President Roosevelt's blunt reminder that to refuse the worker a decent livelihood and security fosters class dissension "which in other countries has led to dictatorship."

PLANE DUSTER THRILLS CITY

RESIDENTS of the Flower and Redinger street neighborhood who were awakened at 5:30 Sunday morning by an airplane, and who gained the impression that the pilot was trying to rip shingles off their roofs by hand, were mistaken.

It was P. J. Murray and his plane, dusting a field of peppers for the Haven Seed company.

One citizen who felt that this was no hour for a flier to be practicing for the National Air Races, called the police. Officer William Nielson, investigating, discovered that Murray was after pepper weevil, not stunting championships. He simply had to skim a few roofs before getting down to the pepper field, at the end of Flower street.

Aerial dusting of agricultural crops to eradicate pests is the latest and most effective mode of pest control, and is becoming an organized service.

It was explained in the local case yesterday that the early-hour dusting was necessary as the work must be done before the wind rises.

WEEK-END MISHAPS CLAIM TWO LIVES

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 7.—(UP)—An automobile accident and a supposed drowning claimed two lives here over the weekend.

Mrs. Della Elizabeth Murphy, 40, of Oakland, was killed when the car in which she was riding skidded off the Stockton highway. Her husband, Harry Ogden Murphy, 42, Mrs. Margaret Murphy, 60, and Mrs. Mary Van Ostrand, 70, were injured.

Sheriff's deputies dragged the American river for 7-year-old William Smith of Los Angeles, whose clothes were found on the bank. The boy was believed to have drowned while wading.

RICHMAN IN PARIS TO LONDON FLIGHT

LE BOURSE AIRPORT, Paris, Sept. 7.—(UP)—The American transatlantic fliers, Richard Merrill and Harry Richman, took off from here today for Croydon Airport, London, at 3:30 p. m. From England they plan to fly back to the United States.

CUTTER TOWS LOST VESSEL TO S. D. PORT

Pacific Queen Expected to Reach Harbor with Boys
Within Few Days

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Sept. 7.—(UP)—A score of worried Southern California mothers today were assured their sons would arrive from a summer cruise in time to return to school as the Coast Guard Cutter Shoshone took the square-rigged sailing ship, Pacific Queen, and its crew of Sea Scouts in tow.

The Pacific Queen was discovered wallowing on a calm sea by the cutter which had been sent out from here after the sailing ship radioed it was running low on provisions.

Although Coast Guard regulations do not permit cutters to tow vessels not in distress, the ruling apparently was made flexible enough to include the becalmed ship.

Previously the Coast Guard had refused to send a boat after the Pacific Queen although mothers of the youths aboard pleaded that their boys would not arrive in time for the opening of school sessions.

The Shoshone was dispatched Friday, however, when the ship reported it was running low on food. It was the third time the boat reported a lack of food aboard.

The first occasion the Cutter Calypso made a contact off the Guadalupe Islands. A Matson line freighter supplied the second batch of provisions.

A report not confirmed by the Coast Guard said that an investigation would be made after the Pacific Queen reaches San Diego to learn why the ship left port for a long cruise without sufficient supplies aboard.

The Pacific Queen was contacted approximately 700 miles from here and is expected to reach San Diego Wednesday or Thursday.

Tells Drought Findings
Seated before a microphone in the lower room of the executive mansion the president delivered one of the longest addresses he has made in months as he summarized his findings in the drought regions.

He declared that "the farmers of America want a sound national agricultural policy," promised them continued federal help in solving their problems and then swung into a review of the labor picture from the national viewpoint.

The president praised the courage of those whom he said were winning their way out of the depression, likening their fortitude to that of the embattled drought farmer.

He drew a bright word picture of industrial re-employment but declared that government spending was responsible in large part for keeping industry going and putting it into a position to make re-employment possible.

"Government orders," he said, "were the backbone of heavy industry; government wages turned over and over again to make consumer

CROWDS AMUSED BY STINSON'S HORSES

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 7.—(UP)—An act featuring Play Boy, one-ton draft horse of E. G. Stinson and sons of Orange, and 10 of his offsprings entertained the state fair horse show crowd last night.

Play Boy brought cheers from 5000 spectators when he pushed his youngest twins around the arena in a "baby buggy" and was followed sedately by eight pondorous sons.

FAVORITE Michael Detroyat, winner in yesterday's Greve Trophy races at the National Air Races in Los Angeles, is the outstanding favorite to win the $20,000 Thompson trophy race, world's premier 150- mile speed classic.

Two Pilots Crash Planes
Attempting to Land
After Speed Event

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 7.—(UP)—A young strapping Frenchman who drives a racing plane like Babe Ruth used to hit home runs was an established favorite against an American field today in the $20,000 Thompson Trophy race, off-metric speed dash in the 4-day National Air Races.

Only engine trouble or a crash appeared likely to halt Michel Detroyat from winning the world's premier 150-mile speed classic.

And the engine of his long indigo blue racing plane gave no sign of anything but speed and endurance as it thundered over a 100-mile route to whip the best America had to offer yesterday in the $10,000 Greve Trophy race.

Detroyat, who once held the world's land plane speed record, finished seven miles ahead of the field, and his $1,000,000 Caudron-Renault racer was not even pushed to the limit of its tremendous power. His average speed of 247.300 miles per hour—more than four miles per minute—was approximately 26 m. p. h. slower than the performance it was in a qualifying dash earlier in the meet.

Record for the Thompson run—which spans 15 10-mile laps—is 252 set by Jimmy Doolittle four years ago.

Four Rivals Out
Crashes have robbed Detroyat of four of his rivals—Benny Howard, S. J. Wittman, R. A. Kling and Joe Jacobson—and of 12 others only two appeared to offer any kind of a threat.

Earl Ortmann, reckless tow-headed Oklahoman, was a formidable contender in his Rider speedster which reputedly is capable of 300 m.p.h. The other was Harry Crosby, stocky little airman pilot from Glendale, Calif., with his highly rated but temperamental home-racer, Crosby, however, was still having trouble with his retractable landing gear, which twice has locked on him in the air, and he may not start.

A Sunday crowd of 80,000 persons, still marveling at the sight of the French plane lapping all six of its American rivals at least once, was brought to its feet gasping when Jacobson and Kling cracked up in front of the grandstand as they tried to land.

Detroyat was just stepping out of his blue Thunderbolt to receive the crowd's plaudits when Jacobson, whose quest of Bendix prize money ended with him bailing out of an exploding ship, attempted to ease his racing plane into a landing while traveling 100 m. p. h. The 415-pound white How-

INVESTIGATE DEATH OF 2-YEAR-OLD BOY

HAYWARD, Calif., Sept. 7.—(UP)—An autopsy was to be performed today over the body of two-year-old Kent Whetstone, son of a Hayward physician, who was partially buried beneath sand in a children's sandbox in the yard of the Whetstone residence.

A preliminary examination of the body failed to show whether the infant died as the result of a fall or whether death was caused by suffocation when his mouth was filled with sand.

Deputy Sheriff Strobel said there was sufficient sand on his face to cause suffocation, but that the exact cause of death could not be determined until an autopsy.

Parents said they believed playmates of the child, about his same age, innocently poured sand on the baby's face, choking him, as he lay in the sandbox after falling.

U. S. WILL ACT IN SEA STRIKE

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7.—(UP)—The United States government today intervened to settle a labor-shipowners dispute which has caused tie-up of the Dollar company's luxury liner, President Hoover, for three days and threatened a new crisis among the San Francisco waterfront.

Company officials meanwhile announced the President Hoover's sailing time had been rescheduled for noon today and advised the vessel's 500 passengers that the ship's Oriental cruise would no longer be delayed.

The department of labor dispatched Edward H. Fitzgerald, federal conciliator who has participated in several west coast maritime disputes, from Los Angeles to San Francisco to attempt arbitration in the controversy.

The tie-up of the vessel resulted from refusal of its deck crew to sign on for the new cruise, in protest against discharge of Charles Brenner, sailors union of the Pacific delegate. Brenner was dismissed for "insubordination." Officials said he had delayed sailing from an Oriental port 20 minutes because, as ship's delegate, he protested because a hatch had not been covered.

The company refused to reinstate Brenner. Other sailors, members of the union, then refused to sign articles for the voyage, joining the deck crew in the walk-out and causing the tie-up.

The union insists that Brenner must be accepted as a member of the crew but is willing that another seaman be named ship's delegate.

The Dollar line, however, is equally insistent that it will not accept Brenner in any capacity. R. Stanley Dollar, president of the company, presented the em-

AWARD PRIZES AT LIVESTOCK SHOW

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 7.—(UP)—With more than 525 entries in the stalls on the state fair grounds, Future Farmers of America livestock entries judged over the weekend brought ribbons to their high schools agriculture student owners over a wide area of California.

In dairy cattle, William Cerutti of Newman had champion Holstein bull and Kenneth Wenger of Modesto champion cow. David Smith of Modesto showed the champion Jersey bull and Charles Harding of Modesto champion cow. The Guernsey champions were James Bussell of Bakersfield in males and Albert James of Lodi in females.

On land, at sea and in the air France will bulwark its defenses, it was announced. Credits for the work will be advanced immediately, although the cabinet's decision to spend these additional funds must be approved later by parliament.

France Plans Huge Military Program

PARIS, Sept. 7.—(UP)—France today replied to Germany's military expansion by making plans to spend 4,200,000,000 francs, (about $275,000,000) next year to reinforce its military might.

On land, at sea and in the air France will bulwark its defenses, it was announced. Credits for the work will be advanced immediately, although the cabinet's decision to spend these additional funds must be approved later by parliament.

Arab's Attempt To Slay Nurock Fails

JERUSALEM, Sept. 7.—(UP)—An Arab attempted unsuccessfully today to assassinate Max Nurock, assistant to the chief secretary of the Palestine government.

Five shots were fired at him near New Gate, a few yards from the post office, as he was going to work. None took effect.

British Surgeon Dies From Grief

LEEDS, England, Sept. 7.—(UP)—Grieved and distraught by the death of his wife a week ago, one of England's most famous surgeons, Lord Moynihan, 70, died today.

Moynihan was one of Great Britain's greatest cancer specialists. He championed the "right to die" movement. Last Saturday, although apparently healthy, he suffered a stroke from which he never recovered.

PICK DETROIT TO WIN DERBY

and Special leaped into the air as its wheels touched the runway, wobbling crazily, struck the ground again with tremendous force and nosed over.

Jacobson had just been started for the field hospital to be treated for a slight cut on the face, when King came roaring down across the field. His sky-blue racer grazed a guywire of the home pylon as he cut wide to avoid the crowd clustered about Jacobson's plane, plowed into a field car and flipped end over end, piling up in a heap of splintered wreckage. The Lemont, Ill., flier crawled out with only a few cuts and abrasions. His wife promptly announced his retirement from racing.

Harold Neumann of Kansas City, who is the defending champion in today's Thompson race, finished second in the Greve event. He completed the 20 1/2-mile laps at an average speed of 225.858 m. p. h. It was his second victory of the day. Earlier he routed a 4-plane field to win the special $3000 Shell award over a 50-mile route. His speed in both races left him far behind Detroit, however.

Art Chester of Chicago, piloting a lemon-colored plane of his own design, ended the Greve sprint in third place with an average of 224.682 m.p.h. He was second behind Neumann in the earlier dash.

Detroit's victory netted him $4,900—$3,400 for winning and $1,500 for setting a new record in the event. Neumann picked up $1,250 for second place, and Chester collected $1,100.

Other Greve finishers and their winnings were Kling $765; Jacobson, $595; Roger Don Rae, Stockton, N. J., $425, and Marion McKee, Inglewood, Calif., who wound up in last place and out of the money.

Although 17 planes in all were entered in the Thompson race, only eight were regarded as probable starters. They were Detroit, Neumann, Chester, Lee Miles of Wichita, Kan.; Lee Schoenhair, Los Angeles; McKee, David R. Elmen- dore, Palms, Calif., and Ortmann. The race starts at 4 p. m. (P.S.T.).

RHYTHM HAS POWER OVER MAN'S SLEEP

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UP)—When you roll over in bed for a final snooze in the morning, you are obeying a mysterious "diurnal rhythm," according to Dr. John H. Welch of the Harvard biological laboratory.

That is only one of the conclusions drawn by Dr. Welch after a series of animal experiments.

For five months he kept the beast in total darkness to determine if it would react just the same as if there were regular alternation between darkness and light. Throughout the period, Dr. Welch said, the animal would wake at the time of sunrise and retire at the time of sunset. Thus, he concluded, there must be some inherent timing device that regulates the length of time the animal—and perhaps man—sleeps.

Pope Carries on Despite Infirmity

Handicapped by weakness in the legs, ascribed to age and worry over the Spanish atrocities against the clergy, Pope Pius XI bravely continues his duties at the summer Vatican, Castel Gondolfo. This newest picture to reach America reveals him seated on the papal throne, a boy kneeling for his blessing.

News Behind The News

By Paul Mallon

EVEN STEPHEN—

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Those who watched President Roosevelt's meeting with Governor Landon closest called it a draw.

The Kansas governor used it to establish the fact that he shaves every morning, and Mr. Roosevelt discovered that what all the governors want out of him is cash. Every state authority met by the president, except the Kansan, mentioned what a great drought relief job he could do if only furnished with some of Mr. Morgenthau's inexhaustible funds.

The result was that everyone went home satisfied with having told his side of the story, but nobody got any money.

FRIENDLINESS

Counselors of both Mr. Roosevelt and Governor Landon told them no good would come of their meeting. Little incidents, they said, would be played out of all proportion to proper significance. Either Mr. Roosevelt or Governor Landon would emerge, they contended, with superior honors, and the one who lost would suffer political ignominy. They were wrong. Governor Landon ran into Mr. Roosevelt with his hand outstretched and vice versa. The amicable feelings on both sides were really as strong as expressed. Des Moines authorities felt they had witnessed a spectacular political show without a climax.

COINCIDENCE—

Most publicized development of government is not the Roosevelt-Landon conference or the war in Spain. It is a meeting of a couple of people here under the title of the "Third World Power conference." Every newsmen in Washington has received upwards of eight million words of authoritative analyses of the gathering, which is officially subtitled as "Second Congress On Large Dams."

The explanation of all this extensive mimeographing apparently is that there is a presidential campaign under way and the subject of power is an issue.

Ordinarily the Second Congress On Large Dams is held in June. September this year is nearer November.

Note—If you wish any further information regarding the "Third World Power Conference and Second Congress On Large Dams," ask announcements advise you to call District 1820, Extension 1231, which is Mr. Jakes' interior department, and the answering voice will inform you she is in charge of publicity for the TWPC and SCOLDS.

INTRODUCTION

Father Coughlin and his vice-presidential candidate are virtually strangers. Coughlin met O'Brien a week before the head of the ticket, Mr. Lemke, decided to run.

The microphone padre went to his good friend, Whitney, of the railroad brotherhood, and asked him to suggest someone who would appeal to the labor vote. Whitney mentioned O'Brien. Coughlin went down to Boston a week before the announcement to inspect his candidate.

What made O'Brien presentable to Coughlin was mainly the fact that he was an enemy of Governor Curley. It seems that Curley and Coughlin once were close friends. Coughlin used to visit the Massachusetts political maestro frequently. They differed, however, regarding a political appointment and both have been gunning for each other ever since.

NO INTRODUCTION—

A fellow who is running for the presidency by the name of William Lemke was having dinner with his following, numbering at least five persons, at Manchester, New Hampshire. The subject of discussion was what an unsatisfactory Senator George Moses had turned out to be when he was a senator. To the surprise of Mr. Lemke and the other five persons, in walked no other than Senator George Moses. He threw his political arms around the culprit and said: "Well, here is my old friend, Bill."

Bill impersonated silliness.

CORRECTION—

The Agriculture department officially set out an announcement signed by Dr. L. H. Bean, economic adviser, which started off as follows:

"Food prices, in spite of the record droughts of 1934 and 1936, continue to keep pace with earnings of employed factory workers. Employed consumers can still buy more food with their present earnings than they were able to buy in 1928 and 1929."

Fortunately the commerce department issues a statement monthly regarding factory payrolls. It shows that factory employment in 1929 averaged 93 per cent and today it is 80 per cent.

As a result the Agriculture department has issued a correction and a kill. It wants Dr. Bean's announcement to start out: "Employed consumers can still buy more food with their present earnings than they were able to buy in 1928 and 1929."

So be it.

BRITISH RADIO GOES AMERICAN IN WISCRACKS

LONDON, (UP)—Robert ("Bob") Bowman is Britain's Ted Husing. He is the only wise-cracking sports radio commentator in this country, and he has done much to revolutionize the stodgy way in which British commentators usually describe events.

Even to the British listeners-in themselves, the "sobs" and "ah's" the "I say, that was a good one," and the "frightfully decent shot," of the usual British announcer have become a joke.

The Oxford and Cambridge boat race this year was an outstanding example, coming in for a good deal of criticism in the press. The broadcaster, an ex-rowing Blue, seemed to have Cambridge leanings. At least, all he kept telling the public was that "Cambridge are rowing awfully well." "They're rowing faster than Oxford," "They're about three lengths in front," and then as a sort of after-thought, he would remark, "Oxford are rowing quite well, too."

Different Style

Bowman, a Canadian, has a different style altogether, resembling the usual wise-cracking broadcast of the American commentator.

He first came to public notice when he broadcast the Olympic ice-hockey match between Britain and the United States at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany.

His flow of chatter, which might to the seasoned American ear sound a little amateurish, delighted the British listeners. The game, it will be recalled, decided the world and Olympic championships, and was a little rough. Bowman, with his, "Say, folks, this is an ice-hockey match, not a fight," and "Bingo, he's socked him in the jaw," evoked many a chuckle around British firesides.

Roxy-Like

A week after that broadcast, the Daily Express announced that Bowman had joined its staff to report ice-hockey. He was given a weekly column which always started: "Good morning, folks, this is Bob Bowman calling!" It was that kind of a column.

For a time, the British Broadcasting Corporation, for whom Bowman did his commentating, did not use him on sports events, and there were rumors that Sir John Reith, "dictator" of British radio, had not been too pleased with his Garmisch broadcast.

There was never any confirmation of these rumors, however, and lately Bowman has been employed more and more frequently on sports broadcasts, although his specialty is ice-hockey.

Covered Races

Recently he wise-cracked his way through an automobile race meet at the Brooklands track, cracking British ribs with his reference to the "two bob" he'd lost on a car "because he liked its color."

He also broadcast a running commentary on the Wimbledon Cup lawn tennis match at Wimbledon.

HALT SPANISH REBEL ADVANCE

ened to kill their prisoners if the fort were taken. It was not known whether the loyalists had made good their threat or whether the hostages had been taken to San Sebastian. One report was that they had been released and were hiding in the hills—but no one definitely knew their fate.

REBELS DRIVEN BACK FROM MADRID

MADRID, Sept. 7.—(UP)—Rebels striking at Madrid and Toledo from the southwest were driven back six kilometers in savage fighting at Salaverra de la Reina, 68 miles from the capital, the war office announced today.

At 9 a. m. today the ministry of war announced that the loyalists at Huecas continued to capture buildings in the town. On the southern front, the government forces at Almeria scored several victories, taking Tevez, 25 miles southeast of Granada and also the villages of Tutellar and Alledajar in the same vicinity.

The announcement said that peasants were rising against the rebels in Galicia. The victory cheered the four day old Red government at the start of the eighth week of one of the bloodiest fratricidal wars in history, although earlier reports that the battle had "eliminated" the threat to Madrid from this quarter were not borne out.

No Estimate of Loss

The fighting was still going on today with neither side estimating its casualties. The new national Republican guards, storm guards and militia massed suddenly after a period of retreat and launched a vicious counter-offensive against the rebel forces under General Emilio Mola, according to reports of the battle reaching the capital.

Aided by loyal artillery and planes the government troops advanced in battalions of 200 against the seasoned rebel army of Foreign Legionnaires and Moors. Despite machine gun nests manned by the Moors the loyalists succeeded in recovering almost four miles of battle front.

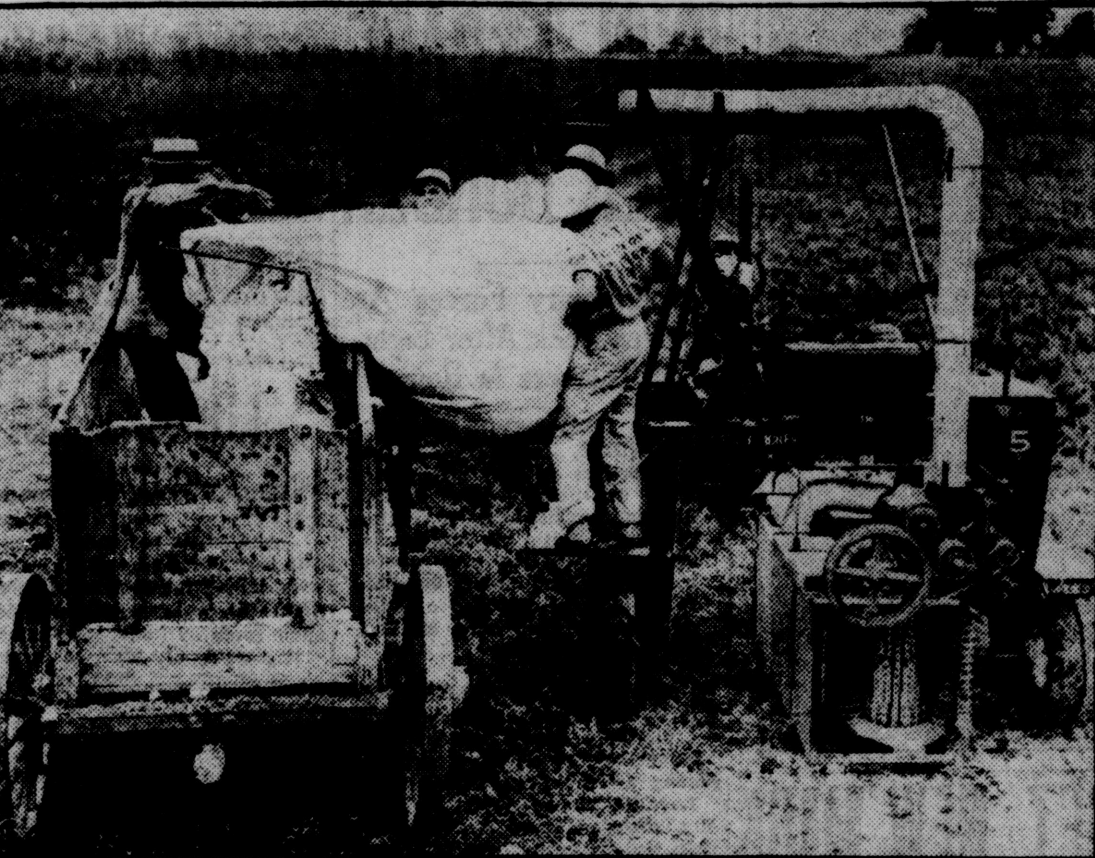

The announcement of the Talavera fighting was preceded by an eight hour conference of members of the new, and first avowedly Red, government cabinet. Simultaneously the war ministry reported advances on four other fronts.

Parents Brave Deadly Germs in Fight to Save Son

With his parents acting as "living test tubes" in a desperate battle to save him from death by streptococcal infection of the specific viridans type, almost always fatal, Philip Levitt, 7-year-old Chicago boy, is shown here as his sister, Floralee, reads to him. The parents underwent inoculation with the death-dealing germs and the serum from their blood will be introduced into the lad's veins. Only antidote for the ailment, declares Dr. Morris Fishbein, health writer for NEA Service and this newspaper, is blood from a newly recovered victim, and these are rare, as the infection has a very high mortality rate.

Cotton Picker Gets Its First Public Tryout

THREE INJURED IN CRASH ON CANYON ROAD

Three persons were injured last evening on Santa Ana canyon road, near Olive, in a three-car collision reported to California Highway Patrol Officer Oscar Kelly.

As Bert Singer, 50, Los Angeles, sought to make a left turn into a garage, a car operated by Pearl Bowen, 24, Los Angeles, collided head-on with one driven by Lawrence A. Timken, 17, Box 21, Olive.

Mrs. Bowen, Timken and Chester Bowen, 30, were injured.

Four men were arrested during the week end on charges of drunk driving. After his car crashed against a tree at Costa Mesa, Charles Young, 37, resort superintendent, Laguna Beach, was charged with drunk driving by Highway Patrol Officers Horace Inge and Bennie Craig. Young declared he was innocent, had hired a youth to drive him to Santa Ana but was left "holding the sack" as the youth emerged from the car after the crash, and disappeared.

Louis Collins, 22, Tustin farm hand, was charged with drunk driving on 101 highway, Tustin, early this morning. He was arrested by Deputy Sheriffs Fred Swayze and Ives Brown.

John Stokes, 31, Orange, was arrested on 101 highway at Chapman avenue Saturday night and charged with drunk driving. The arrest was made by Deputies Brown and Ezra Stanley. Mrs. Emma Stokes, 24, Orange, records show, was charged with being intoxicated; she was with Stokes, Oscar Wood, 50, Buena Park, was arrested by Chief John Stanton, Tustin, and charged with driving drunk.

During the weekend, 19 persons, including several women, were jailed on charges of being intoxicated.

Stephen Ursua, 29, Delhi, was charged with being drunk and with reckless driving in which a person suffered bodily injury, Saturday evening. He was jailed.

Don Warhurst, 2003 Bush street, informed city police he was driving south on Broadway yesterday afternoon when his dog leaped into his lap, causing him to lose control of his car, which collided with a parked car belonging to C. F. Wright, 1420 North Broadway. No one was injured.

G. P. Hayward, 615 Fairlawn, was bruised when his bicycle collided Saturday evening at Fifth and Artesia, with an automobile operated by C. R. Hayes, 413 1/2 West Fourth. He was treated and taken to his home.

KEN Murray SAYS:

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—While we thought there was nothing new under the sun, David Cushman Doyle, PWA economist, now comes along and says that the 1929 crash was caused by too much saving. . . . See the point? From now on the New Deal taxes will quietly remove your savings and you won't have anything to worry about.

What Mr. Cushman says about too much saving in 1929 may sound logical, but those depositors certainly found an awful lot of empty banks when they finally looked into them.

It seems the main difference between the Democratic and G. O. P. policies is whether we should spend money, or save it. . . . Most of us would be satisfied if someone could just show us how to make it.

After all, now that we've shelled out so much for prosperity, it's high time that somebody specked up its delivery.

OXFORD'S TEACHERS MUST BE VERSATILE

OXFORD, England (UP)—Teachers in the rural schools of Britain, who met here under auspices of Women's National Liberal Federation, described their duties briefly as:

- Making wills for local people;
 - Helping choose wallpaper and curtains;
 - Attending and advising the Parish Council meetings;
 - Helping women farmers;
 - Coaching policemen for their examinations;
 - Filling out income tax forms for community;
 - Serving on the women's institute committee;
 - Playing the organ in church and at concerts when the organist is taken ill;
 - Organizing outdoor sports;
 - Calling to see all the new babies;
 - Visiting the sick and aged;
 - Cutting the old people's hair.
- But, according to Mrs. Margaret Winttingham, president of the meeting, "the qualifications for a teacher in the country seem to be only that she is over eighteen years old and has been vaccinated."

U. S. AUTHORITY EXTENDED OVER MIGRANT BIRDS

WASHINGTON (UP)—A bill passed by congress during the last session and approved by President Roosevelt on June 20 will reinforce and extend federal authority over migratory birds, the biological survey announces.

The new law is designed to make effective in this country a convention between the United States and Mexico for protection of migratory birds and animals. Ratification of the new law by Mexico is yet to follow, and it will take effect upon proclamation of the exchange of ratifications.

Federal authority over migratory birds heretofore had depended on the migratory bird treaty with Great Britain. The new treaty reinforces this authority by providing for a dual basis for the federal regulations conserving ducks, geese and other migrants.

purchasing power and to sustain every merchant in the community. Businessmen with their businesses, small and large, had to be saved. Private enterprise is necessary to any nation which seeks to maintain the Democratic form of government. In their case, just as certainly as in the case of drought-stricken farmers, government spending has saved."

Mr. Roosevelt, as in his extemporaneous addresses during his recent trip, placed emphasis upon the philosophy of "spending money to save money."

Urges Worker Co-operation
He urged workers to cooperate and take full advantage of the intensification of the work of the federal-state employment service. "This does not mean," he added, "that there will be any lessening of our efforts under WPA and PWA and other work relief programs until all workers have decent jobs in private employment at decent wages."

Then he appealed to employers, large and small, throughout the nation to use the help of the state and federal employment service wherever possible.

The president's defense of labor began with a statement that "labor is entitled to as much respect as property."

"But our workers with hand and brain deserve more than respect for their labor," he said. "They deserve practical protection in the opportunity to use their labor at a return adequate to support them at a decent and constantly rising standard of living, and to accumulate a margin of security against the inevitable vicissitudes of life."

Mr. Roosevelt opened his address by asserting that "I have been on a journey of husbandry." He detailed his visit into the stricken great plains country. He described conditions of the farmer and cattleman.

Not Permanent Disaster
"Yet I would not have you," he said, "think for a single minute that there is permanent disaster in these drought regions, or that the picture I saw meant depopulating these areas."

"No cracked earth, no blistering sun, no burning wind, no grasshoppers are a permanent match for the indomitable American farmers and stockmen and their wives and children who have carried on through desperate days, and inspire us with their self-reliance, their tenacity and their courage. It was their fathers' task to make homes; it is our task to keep those homes; it is our task to help them with their fight."

Praising the spirit of cooperation displayed by the governors and other officials of the drought states, the president pointed out, however, that "no simple panacea can be applied to the drought problem in the whole of the drought area."

"The farmers of America," he said, "want a sound national agricultural policy in which a permanent land use program will have an important place. They want assurance against another year like 1932 when they made good crops but had to sell them for prices that meant ruin just as surely as did the drought. Sound policy must maintain farm prices in good crop years as well as in bad crop years. It must function when we have drought; it must also function when we have bumper crops."

He declared that using the report of the great plains drought committee as a basis "we are cooperating successfully and in entire accord with the governors and state planning boards" and that "as we get this program into operation the people more and more will be able to maintain themselves on the land."

He traced the extent of federal participation in a program of soil erosion prevention, water conservation, dam building and farm-market road construction. He pledged relief and work at fair wages for stricken farmers and added:

"The people in the drought area do not want to be dependent on federal, state or any kind of charity. They want for themselves and their families an opportunity to share fairly by their own efforts in the progress of America."

"Despite the efforts of union leaders to fog the issue, the whole case simmers down to this: Does the Dollar line, or any other steamship company, have the right to select the men on whom it must depend for the safeguarding of human life?"

Dollar cited a provision of the working agreement existing between the employers and the union:

"Nothing herein shall prevent any of the employers from discharging any member of the crew who is not satisfactory to them." Regardless of the outcome of the President Hoover incident, it was believed that the controversy may have serious consequences, as shipowners showed no signs of receding from their stand that they would not negotiate a new contract with the sailors union.

CLOSER CHECK ON TREE FIRES MADE POSSIBLE

WASHINGTON (UP)—To help in determining the degree of fire hazard, plans for a cumulative humidity record have been adopted at Grand Teton National park, Wyo., the Interior department has announced. The Region Four Fire Control Manual of the United States Forest Service will form the basis of the project.

Daily humidity records were started on June 11, using 37 per cent relative humidity as the normal average. Readings for an 8-day period thereafter indicated a slight excess of moisture over normal years. Further conclusions will be announced from time to time.

Two CCC camps are assigned to Grand Teton National park and are available, at the first reports of forest fires, to carry out the technique of suppression and fire control which are among the duties in which all enrollees are drilled.

Infra-red panoramic photographs, taken for forestry technicians of the National Park service, also are helpful in early detection of forest fires, says the department.

These photographs sharpen all outlines, clearly define the horizon, regardless of any ordinary haze present when the picture is taken, and provide a panoramic picture by use of which, checking with a map, the fire lookout man may quickly determine the location of suspicious smoke.

SPANISH MISSION LEADER IN TALK

FULLERTON, Sept. 7.—"Spanish-Speaking Americans; Their Importance to Us," was the topic on which Dr. Paul Wernshuis, head of the Spanish-speaking Presbyterian Mission work in this country, addressed members of the Presbyterian church at the morning service yesterday.

Announcements included a meeting of the teaching staff of the church school Wednesday evening in room one of the church in charge of superintendent Lyman Scheel. Dr. Graham C. Hunter, church minister, will outline objectives of the various departments for the new year. The first rehearsal of the choir, under the direction of Miss Ruth Titton, will also be held Wednesday evening.

The young peoples' conference of the church will be held next Sunday afternoon at the Newport Beach home of the minister. Plans for the fall will be made by the group. Members of the congregation were invited to attend the sessions.

MORE DROUGHT AHEAD IN WEST STUDY REVEALS

WASHINGTON, (UP)—The north central states probably will have several more years of drought before the weather pendulum again swings toward increased precipitation, according to studies made by the Smithsonian Institution. But after 1940 there should not be another major drought until about 1950.

This theory of weather cycles, based on observations extending over a century, indicates that droughts in the middle west occur every 23 years and become very intense, like the present one, each 48 years. The theory was propounded by Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Institution, after a detailed study of the water level of the Great Lakes from 1927 to date.

No Dust Bowl
Thus, if Abbot is correct, it appears that fears of the north middle west becoming a permanent desert are groundless, except so far as the "dust bowl" may be caused by plowing up land. The region has experienced alternate periods of dryness and adequate rainfall for centuries.

Temperature and precipitation variations at any particular place on the earth's surface have a marked tendency to repeat themselves every 23 years, which is double the 11-12 year sunspot cycle well known to astronomers, the institution said.

This actually has happened in the north central United States, the water level records show, in the four 23-year periods since 1937. The general contours of the curves of the water-level variations for each of the 23-year intervals are very similar.

It so happens that the most extreme variations repeat at 48-year intervals, or double the 23-year cycle, in that particular area.

Study Lake Huron
Detailed studies made by Abbot of Lake Huron showed that in 1837-38 its level was very high, indicating heavy rainfall. Then it declined steadily until the 1848 drought. Rainfall then increased steadily for five years. Then there was a minor decline, followed by another upward swing until the end of the 23-year period.

The next cycle came between 1860 and 1882. It followed the same course as the previous ones, but its extremes of wetness and dryness were less marked. Serious drought came in 1895-99.

The present 23-year interval started in 1929, the Institution said. "According to the 48-year hypothesis, the region should have been getting dryer ever since. It has. If the cycle continues true to form, the low point should be reached some time between 1938 and 1940, followed by a rapid upswing. Most encouraging is the hope held out by the cycle pattern that there will not be another major drought, after this one is overcome, until 1950."

SLEEP DISTURBED BY MOTORCYCLES

Sleep disturbing motorcycles were under investigation of city police today. A "taxpayer" who wrote on a postal card that he "craves some sleep," asked police to check the motorcycle which makes "too much noise" early every morning in the 1000-block, East Fourth.

"The motorcycle is started each morning about 4:30, and we need our sleep," the taxpayer wrote.

Mrs. R. L. Smith, 620 East Second, reported a motorcycle operated by a man near her home last night was creating a disturbance. When officers investigated, the man had gone.

Police News

A man who stopped his car in front of the H. L. Hutton home, 1142 South Garfield, about 1:30 a. m. today, stepped out of the vehicle with a woman, gave the woman a "friendly sock" on the jaw, and then climbed into the car again, with the woman, and disappeared, was sought by police. Officers F. L. Grouard and Burnette Lane reported they located the couple. It was a family quarrel, the officers reported.

Officers were unable to locate a prowler who was reported flashing a light into homes at 922 and 926 Orange avenue early this morning. L. Bergee reported the prowler.

Mrs. J. Bergman, 1332 West Third, told police a man and car followed her home from the beach late last night, but when Officers F. L. Grouard and Burnette Lane searched the neighborhood, they were unable to find anything wrong, they said.

L. M. Metney, 1212 West Fourth, pleaded with city police Saturday night, to help the neighbors by giving them "a chance to sleep." The complainant told officers a group of Mexicans appeared in the neighborhood between 8 p. m. and midnight, frequently, and made "much noise." Officers will check the vicinity regularly.

On complaint of F. Alarcon, 2026 West Fifth street, three Mexicans were jailed early this morning on charges of disturbing the peace. The Mexicans, assertedly fighting, were Tony Morales, 19, 706 Fairlawn; Isa Parra, 21, 522 Fairlawn; and Henry Mendez, 26, Astor Court, West Fifth. The men were arrested by Officers A. F. Moulton and Ralph Pantuso on warrants issued by Judge Kenneth Morrison of Santa Ana justice court.

Officers H. E. Holmes and C. V. Adams were unable to find a prowler reported active last night near the home of Mrs. M. Harbert, 317 West Fourth.

After he assertedly refused to obey three separate suggestions that he go home "and sleep it off," Ray L. McCannon, 26, 413½ West Fourth, was arrested at Fourth and Birch, late Saturday night and charged with being drunk. The arrest was made by Officers W. B. Moreland and Ralph Pantuso.

H. G. Gordon, Fresno, told sheriff's officers yesterday that he was driving along 101 highway nine miles south of Santa Ana when a hit-and-run driver crashed into the Gordon vehicle and escaped. No one was injured.

Joe Garcia, 25, La Jolla camp, was arrested by Officer Horace Lucy of Placencia Saturday night and charged with disturbing the peace.

Warren McDonald, 26, transient, was arrested early yesterday morning by Deputy Sheriffs G. F. McKelvey and James Workman on a vagrancy charge.

Charged with failure to provide for his family, Kenneth Headley, 25, was arrested Saturday night by Deputy Sheriffs G. F. McKelvey and A. W. Fullerton and held for removal to Ventura county, where he will be prosecuted.

Rex Osborne, 27, Doheny Park, was jailed Saturday on charges of disturbing the peace and assault and battery. Bail was set by Justice C. C. Cravath, Laguna Beach, at $200. Osborne was brought in by Officer Smith, Laguna Beach.

REGULATION OF BUSINESS TO BE FORUM SUBJECT TUESDAY

To what extent should the government or lack of regulation of business by governments be one of the liveliest questions before the American people during the past three or four years and has been generally popular as a subject for argument for 25 years, James Anderson, member of the Forum arrangements committee said today. "Every citizen should be informed upon the pros and cons of business regulation because it affects his life vitally. I think an understanding of the problems of business regulation is absolutely necessary to anyone who wishes to cast an intelligent vote at election time. We should have a large attendance tomorrow night."

Both Burke and Utt are sincere in their opposing views of the subject and will present enlightening information which should benefit everyone, Anderson declared.

COW TESTING ASSOCIATION WINS HONORS

Members of the Orange County Cow Testing association won almost all the honors in sight in competition with all cow testing associations of the United States, with respect to production of milk and butterfat production per cow, showing the exceptional quality of cows in the local herds, and the ability of their owners as dairy-men.

The Orange county association also led all associations in the average production of butterfat in associations having from 11 to 20 herds under test, and ranked second among all associations in average production of milk.

On January 1, 1935, there were 876 cow-testing associations in the United States with 17,344 herds and 404,412 cows under test, showing the extent of competition involved.

The three leading counties in average production of butterfat were: 1—Orange county, California; 2—Morris, New Jersey; 3—Mendocino-Lake counties, California.

The three leading counties in average production of milk were: 1—Sunflower, Kansas; 2—Orange county, California; 3—United, New York.

Roosevelt Peace Policies Setting World Example

President Roosevelt is giving the world an object lesson of the fact that a nation desiring peace can have peace. By his skillful and courageous handling of foreign problems, the Chief Executive is not only avoiding war, but he is avoiding the occasions which lead to war.

Unfortunately the nations of Europe seem to be aligning themselves again in one of those "balance of power" arrangements which proved such a contributing factor in bringing about the World war. Perhaps the menace of another general war will ease, as everyone fervently hopes.

In the meantime, however, the remote causes and irritants that frequently bring on armed conflict are present in all too numerous ways.

Stand still, Elephant, you can't dodge this question: Is Gov. Landon going to adopt the Roosevelt Good Neighbor policy or start sending battlehips again to Latin America?

The latest proximate cause is the civil war in Spain, which is tearing apart that unhappy and afflicted land, and causing uneasiness among the neighboring nations. Both sides have their sympathizers.

At President Roosevelt's direction, this country is scrupulously steering clear of incidents and misunderstandings that might result in entanglement. The only incident involving this country, the bombing of the destroyer Kane, was taken care of through the usual diplomatic channels, quickly and well. Extreme caution was taken to make sure that it was not allowed to assume an exaggerated importance in the public mind.

ROOSEVELT GIVES FORMULA

It is this sure touch in the daily handling of diplomatic details that illustrates President Roosevelt's ability in the field of foreign affairs. Misunderstandings between nations do not occur overnight. They result from a long series of small incidents, mishandled and bungled by inept statesmen. As a great scholar has truly said: "Every war is the result of a diplomatic blunder."

The best formula for keeping us out of wars and foreign quarrels was given by President Roosevelt in his speech at Chautauqua. He said: "We can keep out of war if those who watch and decide have a sufficiently detailed understanding of international affairs to make certain that the small decisions of each day do not lend toward war, and if, at the same time, they possess the courage to say no to those who selfishly or unwisely would let us go to war."

FOREIGN POLICIES SUCCESSFUL

The United States today is enjoying the beneficial results of President Roosevelt's policies. He has stressed the intention of this country to remain at peace so often, and he has pursued his policies in such a resolute fashion, that the whole world knows that he means what he says. There is not even the remote suggestion that we may be drawn into the current troubles abroad as a participant.

The President also expressed his views on that subject in his talk at Chautauqua. He said:

"I wish I could keep war from all nations; but that is beyond my power. I can at least make certain that no act of the United States helps to produce or to promote war. I can at least make clear that the conscience of America revolts against war and that any nation which provokes war forfeits the sympathy of the people of the United States."

Stand still, Elephant, you can't dodge this question: Is Governor Landon going to adopt the Roosevelt Good Neighbor policy, or start sending battlehips to Latin America?

Jesse Owens, Olympic Star, Backs Landon

The colored citizens of New York and elsewhere, and the many millions of others who have admired the spirit and determination which have carried Jesse Owens to the heights of athletic fame, will be greatly interested in his announcement that he will take the stump for Governor Landon.

They will be even more interested in the reasons given by the Olympic champion for backing the candidacy of Governor Landon, which shows he is more concerned with the service he can perform for the country than with any personal glory from his achievements. Mr. Owens made his announcement after calling on Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican eastern campaign manager.

"I have told Mr. Martin," he said, "my Olympic triumphs would not mean much if I did not use the leadership those victories gave me to do something for my race. I know that the name of Booker T. Washington will live forever in the memory of the colored people. I would like to become a little bit like him. I would like later on to get into politics to see if I could help."

"Right now, the most important thing, I think, is to elect Gov. Alfred M. Landon president. His election will be good for America, and for the people of the colored race."

"He does not promise a lot of things but what promises he makes I think he will keep. I am just an athlete and I don't know all the figures and arguments, but I do know a sincere man when I read his record and his speeches. I know a man has common sense when he does not spend more than he has in his pocket or in his bank account."

"I know Governor Landon will continue to give every deserving person the relief he needs. But, more than that, I know business will gain such confidence at his election that people of my race and all other Americans will get real jobs in private industry. A runner who makes false starts does not last long in my game, or in any other game. From what I see, Governor Landon is not the kind of man to get away to false starts."

"I want to meet Governor Landon personally. I shall take the stump for him if he wants me to."

News Of Orange And Vicinity

TEACHER WILL LAUNCH 47TH YEAR OF WORK

ORANGE, Sept. 7.—When William Batterman, veteran teacher, returns to his duties as principal of the St. John's parochial school, September 14, he will open the school for the year's work for the thirty-fourth consecutive time. Mr. Batterman probably holds the record for the longest continuous service of any teacher in the vicinity.

Mr. Batterman has taught for the past 47 years teaching in the east before assuming his duties of St. John's school, 34 years ago, in an old building on the corner of Olive street and Almond avenue. A year later the old building which served the church as an educational center for many years, was built. This structure now serves as the Orange Community Welfare store and headquarters for a co-operative association.

Enrollment for St. John's school is set for Thursday of this week. Mr. Batterman serves as principal of the school and teacher of the eighth grade. Paul Hedder, teacher of the seventh grade and the lower grades are taught by J. T. Troester, Theodore Hopmann and Mrs. Edith Gorraht. Registration last year was 209.

JAPANESE LIKE MODERN RHYTHM

TOKYO—(UP)—The new Tokyo symphony orchestra is winning its way to recognition as one of the world's outstanding musical organizations.

It has been honored by an invitation to participate in the International Exposition in Paris next year, when many of the world's most famous orchestras will perform.

The invitation was conveyed by Jacques Thibaud, French violinist, who appeared here in a series of concerts this summer.

Old Masters Popular

The performance and appreciation of Western music is comparatively new in Japan, which has its own musical tradition. But now every concert of the symphony orchestra is a sell-out and the old masters are interpreted in a manner that reflects credit on conductors and players alike.

A typical summer evening in Hibiya Park will find the orchestra playing Mendelssohn, Mozart and Dvorak. The cement and gravelled walks, flower-lined, are thronged with music-lovers, on their way to Hibiya Hall. There are some foreigners, but mostly they are kimonod Japanese.

Girls Are Ushers

Inside the hall girls ushers scurry about. Japanese students in their blue uniforms and peaked caps are smoking a final cigarette before bursting to their seats with a great clatter as the curtains part.

The auditorium seats about 4000 and it is filled to capacity. The music begins. The applause for the orchestra is surprising in its intensity. And the hearers know their music, with the result that conductors are not annoyed by premature applause or clapping of hands between the movements of a symphony.

FRENCH WINES ARE DAMAGED BY DREAD MILDEW NEAR PARIS

PARIS—(UP)—The dreaded mildew menace again threatens French wine crops this year. Unusual weather conditions, ranging from cold snaps with continued rains in some sections of France, have played havoc with many of the crops, with the result that mildew already has attacked the vines in several regions.

It is expected that France's wine production for 1936 will be from 1,000,000,000 to 3,000,000,000 liters less than the average year.

The late cold wave caused complete losses in some restricted localities, but not over wide areas. In many regions, notably the Vouvray, Chinon and Sauterne districts, floods damaged vines situated in low sections, while those on the hilltops were untouched.

The Medoc vines were saved, due to the care of the vineyard workers, who frequently stayed up many nights to guard the delicate vines from frost.

In Alsace, frost and hail blackened some of the leaves and stripped others in spite of the use of anti-hail shells, which were mistaken for tourists as the reopening of hostilities with the Germans a few miles away on the other side of the Rhine River. It is estimated that only 10 per cent of the Alsatian vines will not produce this year.

NEW TRINITY CHURCH RECTOR IN SERMON AT UNION SERVICE

ORANGE, Sept. 7.—Union services held at the First Christian church Sunday evening, marked the initial appearance of the Rev. H. F. Softley, new rector of Trinity Episcopal church.

The Rev. Softley delivered his first sermon before the combined congregations of the churches of Orange, using as the theme of his sermon, "Let Us Make Man in Our Own Image After Our Likeness." Calling attention to the book, "Man the Unknown," by Dr. Alexis Carrel, the Rev. Softley in his explanation of the process of civilization brought out the fact that the knowledge of human nature is comparatively small. Material knowledge overbalances knowledge of ourselves as human beings, he said. An environment has been created for which we are unfitted; the human factors, imagination, intelligence and courage are sadly lacking, the Rev. Softley stated. Sciences of inanimate matter are in this day and age greater than humanness, he added, and before man can find God, he must learn to adapt things to himself. The knowledge of self through science is the only hope for the salvation of man, he said.

The Rev. Softley stated that Dr. Carrel had left God out of his reckoning, that barbarism was the eventual end of man, for the progress of civilization was declining instead of apparently reaching towards perfection. Creation is not a single event, but a continuous process, an eternal process of being, he said. The symphony of a great cathedral being built, i. e. the actual laying of one stone after another was compared with and likened to humanity and the process in building a civilization, the laying of one generation after another.

Our task as Christians, the Rev. Softley said, is to engage in the work of forming a perfect man true to the top of this sermon. The qualities found in our Lord, Jesus Christ, namely, truth or reality, beauty or purity, goodness or righteousness, were and are the essential qualities of humanity for all time. Our endeavorment to find in our environment as much truth, beauty and goodness, and to create an environment whereby these three factors might surge through us would be the only true salvation of the human race, he declared.

Under the direction of Mrs. W. C. Armstrong of Trinity Episcopal church, the musical selections offered included three solos and three anthems, "Joy to the World," "Tell Me the Old Story," and "I Am Thine, Lord." The concluding hymn was "Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Love," sung by the congregation. Invocation was by the Rev. R. B. McAulay of the First Presbyterian church.

The wedding ceremony, Mrs. Merrill Bauer gave a program of piano music, also playing the processional and recessional and accompanying her husband, Merrill Bauer, who played three violin solos, "By the Brook," "Andante Cantabile," and "Wings of Song."

The ceremony took place in an arbor of white blossoms, the drooping branches of great pepper trees forming a lacy canopy for the guests. Willard Lutton, brother of the bride, was usher.

The wedding cake was served with punch following the ceremony. Mrs. Raymond C. Bradford of Garden Grove, sister of the bride, presided at the punch bowl, and the cake, cut by the bride, was served by Mrs. Grant Whitney of Long Beach.

Mrs. Lutton, mother of the bride, wore a gown of rose point lace and Mrs. Hafer, mother of the bridegroom, wore a blue printed silk. Both wore gardenia corsages.

The young people left after the ceremony for Santa Barbara where they will spend their honeymoon. On their return they will establish their home at 2306 Spurgeon street, Santa Ana. For traveling the bride wore a grey sports outfit with black accessories.

Both bride and bridegroom are graduates of the Orange Union High school, the new Mrs. Hafer being a member of the Laguna Beach Art association. She is recognized as a talented young artist, Mr. Hafer is a graduate of the Santa Ana Junior college where he held membership in the Bachelors' club.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hedder returned Saturday from a trip through Switzerland, England and Germany. Mr. Hedder is a teacher in the St. John's Lutheran parochial school.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy J. Green are expected to return home the latter part of the week after a summer spent with relatives in England. They landed in New York last week. Mr. Green is at the head of the music department of the Orange Union high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davis and daughter, Miss Beulah Davis, are expected to return from a trip north to Seattle, Wash., where they visited their daughter, Miss Inez Davis and other relatives. Miss Inez Davis who recently completed a course at the University of Washington, is now employed on the Seattle Times.

HELEN LUTON, ROBERT HAFER ARE MARRIED

ORANGE, Sept. 7.—The lovely gardens of the home of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Colman, Lewis street, was chosen for her wedding by Miss Helen Pauline Lutton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Lutton, 2206 West Chapman avenue, who became the bride of Robert Hafer, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Hafer, of West Orange, late Saturday afternoon. Dr. Robert Burns McAulay, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, read the service in the presence of 150 relatives and friends.

The bride wore a lace frock of white which held a faint rose light and which was fashioned with a full skirt, puffed sleeves and a high neckline. She carried a sheaf of deep gold gladiolus blooms, blue delphinium and sprays of lilies of the valley. Instead of the traditional veil she wore a wreath of orange blossoms.

Miss Lorraine Whitney was maid of honor, wearing turquoise blue satin and carrying a sheaf of yellow gladiolus blooms and blue delphinium. Frank Willis of West Orange served the bridegroom as best man.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Merrill Bauer gave a program of piano music, also playing the processional and recessional and accompanying her husband, Merrill Bauer, who played three violin solos, "By the Brook," "Andante Cantabile," and "Wings of Song."

BREA, Sept. 7.—Property owners of Brea are paying their last assessment on the sewage disposal system installed here 10 years ago. The amount of this final payment by the property owners is $5.15. The first year's assessment was $58, the amount diminishing each year. City records show that all payments have been made and that there are no delinquencies against this account.

Wheelers Will Remain In Brea

BREA, Sept. 7.—Contrary to expectations, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wheeler will not go to Wasco, where he has been employed with an oil concern for several months. Instead they will move into the home of Mrs. Luella Cox on South Orange street as soon as that property is vacated by Mrs. R. T. Smith.

The Nelson Wheeler property, where Mr. and Mrs. Ray Wheeler have been residing for some years, has been purchased by Roy Wheeler, necessitating the moving of the Ray Wheeler family. Ray Wheeler continues work with the same oil company but has been transferred to the local field.

MEMBER QUOTA OF 3750 SET BY RED CROSS

Santa Ana chapter of the American Red Cross plans to recruit the largest membership since the World war period, when its annual Roll Call takes place, between Armistice day and Thanksgiving, with its enrollment quota set at 3750.

Roll Call Chairman Don Jerome announced the quota assigned by the national organization, and disclosed other details of the Roll Call drive at a recent meeting of chapter directors and the executive committee.

The entire chapter area will be covered, he stated, and definite quotas are established for the various branches.

To stimulate Roll Call in Southern California chapters, a state conference has been arranged by the national office at Laguna Beach on October 23. James K. McClintock of Washington, D. C., national vice chairman in charge of finances, will be luncheon speaker. Miss Hazel Bemus, Junior Red Cross chairman, will supervise table decorations.

Mrs. Laura B. Warren, reporting for Col. M. B. Wellington, chairman of disaster relief, announced at the local meeting that the following sub-committee chairmen have accepted appointment: Survey, Ray C. Raddant; rescue, Harry Edwards; medical aid, Dr. John Wehry; shelter, William C. Jerome; food, Harrison White; clothing, Sam Hurwitz; transportation and communication, Don C. Jerome; registration and information, Robert Fernandez; fund raising and publicity, Terry E. Stephenson. A meeting of these sub-committee chairmen was announced for early October.

Miss Margaret Glenn, chairman, gave a summary of life saving work for the season. Harry Edwards, chairman of first aid, reported that two classes, one at Laguna Beach for life guards, and the other for Santa Ana firemen, have completed the standard courses. Two new classes have opened, one at the El Toro CCC camp, the other in Santa Ana for WPA recreational personnel.

Miss Bemus, Junior Red Cross chairman, stated that an exhibit of Junior Red Cross portfolios will be at the Santa Ana school institute Saturday, September 12. She also reported that letters have been sent to all school principals in the county, in preparation for the enrollment of school children in Junior Red Cross.

George T. De Rouhae stated that his home and farm accident committee program will be promoted by the Smedley Toastmasters chapter in Santa Ana, in an effort to reduce accidents in the home.

Christmas bags will be shipped this week to the Pacific area office, according to Mrs. Carrie Leebick, chairman of production. A new production quota for 1937 was accepted by her committee.

Speed of modern travel is almost unbelievable until demonstrated with such force that it must be believed. In a hazy sort of way, I have heard talk of how rapidly one may speed from California to Europe, but I was never impressed. Somehow it was like talk about great sums of money. Say "million dollars" to the average man, and the words will merely flick a vague mental image of a great deal of money. But see fifty thousand dollars in silver coins (I once did, and I don't mind telling you it was not my fifty thousand) and you will get a new idea of what a million would be.

Let's see, I was talking about speed of travel. On a recent Tuesday afternoon, I accompanied Director Eddie Sutherland to a local airport and saw him hop off. He landed in Newark, New Jersey, next morning, and took off shortly afterward on the zepplin, The Hindenburg. The following Saturday he had breakfast with Molnar, the French playwright, in Friedrichshaven, Germany. Four days from California to Germany! It used to take me almost as long to run an errand if I had to pass a sandlot baseball game enroute.

Spotted Pat O'Brien this morning with his chin hanging way down to here. No kidding, he looked as if he had lost his all. Inquiry revealed that Pat's crestfallen mental state was due to the fact that he ordered several tiny swimming suits for his adopted baby girl, Mavoureen. Four of the suits were bright green, as should suit such an Irish lass. The other, slipped in by mistake by a careless saleslady, was orange. Mavoureen will wear nothing but the orange, and any good Irishman can understand Pat's disgust.

Isn't there some sort of smart crack in the fact that Constance Bennett, who has slipped so far down the ladder, is being seen currently in a picture titled "The Outcast Lady"?

It has been suggested that the boat of the Pacific ocean represents the old scar, now largely filled up where the moon was separated from the earth millions of years ago.

ence, and solve their problems with the aid of Jesus Christ. "No permanent or true solution of any question ever will be found without His aid."

Both capital and labor should be free, and the Creator of both should be their arbiter.

This was the declaration of the Rev. Walter Scott Buchanan, in his sermon yesterday morning at the First Christian church.

Paid leadership of labor should be discarded; it could effectively be supplanted by the spirit of Jesus Christ, in the settlement of labor's problems, said the minister.

Labor—capital too—should be free, he said. Labor should be free from the rule of paid leaders in distant places, who do not know the problems of Orange county labor.

The minister pleaded for a friendly Christian spirit in the solution of labor questions.

"I would have labor bring its problems into a hall, and capital bring its problems into that hall. There, I would have them sit down together in friendly co-operation, without outside interference."

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 7. — Acts like this one I am about to relate account for the popularity of Marion Davies among movie underdogs, including me. She walked on to a theater set the other morning and immediately noticed that stuffed dummies had replaced live extras in the audience. This is a regular studio practice, a few hundred dummies, dotted here and there with live, moving extras, look real enough onscreen. Miss Davies proceeded to bawl the living dummies out of the production manager, and refused to work until the dummies were removed and 400 extras called to work. Her parting shot—and did it sound good to the work-by-dayers!—was: "Give the kids a break, and if the studio won't pay for it, I will!"

On the boulevard this morning, just as Ivan Lebedeff kissed the hand of a woman who seemed duly impressed, my favorite drug counter waitress flipped from the corner of her mouth, "With that and a nickel, she can buy a cup of coffee!"

Speed of modern travel is almost unbelievable until demonstrated with such force that it must be believed. In a hazy sort of way, I have heard talk of how rapidly one may speed from California to Europe, but I was never impressed. Somehow it was like talk about great sums of money. Say "million dollars" to the average man, and the words will merely flick a vague mental image of a great deal of money. But see fifty thousand dollars in silver coins (I once did, and I don't mind telling you it was not my fifty thousand) and you will get a new idea of what a million would be.

Let's see, I was talking about speed of travel. On a recent Tuesday afternoon, I accompanied Director Eddie Sutherland to a local airport and saw him hop off. He landed in Newark, New Jersey, next morning, and took off shortly afterward on the zepplin, The Hindenburg. The following Saturday he had breakfast with Molnar, the French playwright, in Friedrichshaven, Germany. Four days from California to Germany! It used to take me almost as long to run an errand if I had to pass a sandlot baseball game enroute.

Spotted Pat O'Brien this morning with his chin hanging way down to here. No kidding, he looked as if he had lost his all. Inquiry revealed that Pat's crestfallen mental state was due to the fact that he ordered several tiny swimming suits for his adopted baby girl, Mavoureen. Four of the suits were bright green, as should suit such an Irish lass. The other, slipped in by mistake by a careless saleslady, was orange. Mavoureen will wear nothing but the orange, and any good Irishman can understand Pat's disgust.

Isn't there some sort of smart crack in the fact that Constance Bennett, who has slipped so far down the ladder, is being seen currently in a picture titled "The Outcast Lady"?

It has been suggested that the boat of the Pacific ocean represents the old scar, now largely filled up where the moon was separated from the earth millions of years ago.

ence, and solve their problems with the aid of Jesus Christ. "No permanent or true solution of any question ever will be found without His aid."

Both capital and labor should be free, and the Creator of both should be their arbiter.

This was the declaration of the Rev. Walter Scott Buchanan, in his sermon yesterday morning at the First Christian church.

Paid leadership of labor should be discarded; it could effectively be supplanted by the spirit of Jesus Christ, in the settlement of labor's problems, said the minister.

Labor—capital too—should be free, he said. Labor should be free from the rule of paid leaders in distant places, who do not know the problems of Orange county labor.

The minister pleaded for a friendly Christian spirit in the solution of labor questions.

"I would have labor bring its problems into a hall, and capital bring its problems into that hall. There, I would have them sit down together in friendly co-operation, without outside interference."

SANTA ANA TO RETURN FROM SUMMER TRIP

The early arrival from Europe of Duncan Harnois, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Harnois, 414 East Walnut street, is anticipated by his family and friends, as he was expected to reach New York either Friday or Saturday of the past week after a summer abroad. He is returning to resume his teaching duties in Burbank as a member of the high school faculty there.

Letters which Mr. and Mrs. Harnois have received from their son have told of some of his varied experiences on this European tour which began in London. From that point he visited Stratford, Windsor, Castle and many of the quaint old cathedral towns. Of special interest to him were opportunities to hear such musical features as the male choir at Westminster Abbey and a concert by Tobias Matthay, noted English pianist-teacher.

His trip to Edinburgh, Scotland, was made on the famous "Flying Scotsman," with a trip to Norway following.

A bicycle tour of Germany ended in Berlin with attendance at the Olympic games, where he was elated over the victories of Owens, Williams, and other American entrants, especially because he was among those discovering the prevailing German hatred of Negroes and Jews.

But it was "Old Heidelberg" that aroused special enthusiasm of this Santa Ana traveler. "I enjoyed the quaint old medieval towns of our bicycle trip," he wrote. "But they can't compare in loveliness with the 'Rhine towns,' and those of Southern Germany. They told us the legends of the old castles as we passed them. It was like Norway where we sailed up the fjords, except that instead of streams tumbling down the rocky hillsides, the Rhine mountains were terraced with grapevines and plants. As we passed the Lorelei some of the Germans sang the song, which is disapproved of by Hitler—it seems the composer was Jewish."

"Nuremberg with its city wall, moats and towers was like something from the Middle Ages. When we reached Munich, we found we were in the art center of Germany if not of Europe. There are some eight buildings for painting exhibitions alone. I visited the one which has original Goya, Rubens, Raphael and other canvases. Munich is especially interesting as the birthplace of the German National Socialist party and is very strongly Hitlerized. In fact there is a memorial center for men who were killed in 1933 for being leaders in the Hitler movement."

From Germany the travelers planned to spend some time in the Swiss Alps where they had a two day rest period at Frutigen with its fine view of peaks including the Jungfrau, and then continued to Geneva.

CONFESSION STORIES

The so-called confession story is in a class of its own. Just what class, is a matter of opinion. The fact remains, "confessions" are meat and drink to a large proportion of American fiction readers, and as such should not be sneered at by the beginning writer.

Ordinary short story technique is of no value in the writing of confession stories. The more technique you have in your system, the less likely you are to make a sale to one of the confession magazines. For this reason it is a good field for the beginner. If he has an imagination (and if he hasn't he has no business trying to write), he will find it comparatively easy to concoct a batch of misery for some soul, who, having suffered, has repented and is ready to "tell all."

Confession stories are supposed to be true stories. That's one thing that isn't true about them. They are very seldom true stories. They may be based on a true incident; they may concern real characters, but they are written, just as any other story is written, by someone with imagination. I have known several short story writers who sold "confessions" consistently. One, a young man, writing under a woman's pseudonym, admits he has confessed every sin he ever heard of, or could imagine. Another man (quite elderly, and a beginner) sold several "confessions" baring his "womanly" soul. When he mailed the stories to the magazines, he substituted the name of Bertha for his own first name, Albert.

The trick, so I have been told by those who are selling, is to make the story sound REAL. For that reason you do not begin what "before" something dramatic is about to happen, as is the case with the average short story, you do not work consistently toward a dramatic climax. You'll find a climax in the "confessions," and very often highly dramatic, but the author did not use the same method of getting there as he would have used had he been writing a third-person story.

A great many confession stories actually begin near the end, then flash back to the events that brought on the misery in which the leading character is now wallowing. Many "true" stories start right out:

"When I was eighteen years old, I left my father's farm in Iowa, and went to Chicago—"

Events then come into the story as they actually happened—or are supposed to have happened. In the beginning, the confession story was almost invariably a sex story, bearing down heavily on the "wronged-woman" situation. That is no longer true. TRUE STORY has many stories (and they are good ones) which involve family misunderstanding, children versus parents, blind or cruel parents who repent later; stories involving catastrophes, and things of that type.

There are several confession magazines on the stands today that go in for the love confession exclusively. These, however, are not so typed as they used to be. They are not so frankly sexy. In many of them you will find good writing.

If you have a story in mind that you think might make a good confession, BUY TWO OR THREE OF THESE CONFESSION MAGAZINES AND READ THEM FROM COVER TO COVER! I get tired telling beginners to READ the magazines they want to make, and I'm sure they get tired hearing the same old song. But it's the only way to find out what the other fellow is selling. And when you read, STUDY. You'll find the confession magazines a good field—just as you would any other field—if you expect to succeed in it.

NEW ANAHEIM HIGH SCHOOL PLANT OPENS ON THURSDAY

ANAHEIM, Sept. 7.—A half million dollar high school plant, adjudged by those who participated in building it "second to none for a town this size," is awaiting the 1000 Anaheim high school boys and girls who will take up their work on September 14.

While the auditorium, forming one end of the plant, is not completed, the big, simply-designed doors which open into the classroom-administration and the library-study hall units will swing open as Thursday to receive students for registration.

The teachers will meet Thursday morning, September 10, seniors will register Thursday afternoon, sophomores and juniors on Friday and freshmen on Saturday. Class start Sept. 14. The teaching staff has been increased by four with two additional teachers replacing two who resigned.

Simple lines, soft pastel colorings, absence of ornamentation or flashiness and withal the qualities of stability and practicability are apparent to the visitor as he first enters the building and through-out every corner of it.

The plant boasts an all-electric heating system, a four-way public address system, individual ventilating systems for each room, and earthquake-proof, fireproof precautions.

Foyer Attractive

The foyer at the main entrance, centering the front of the building on Center street and leading to the classroom-administration unit, is particularly rich in modernistic design and pleasing blending of color tones. Indirect lighting, aluminum stripping and circular walls add to the effect.

On the rear side of the first floor of this center portion is the administrative department, located so that the grounds may be seen from it. The smaller offices, used for the principal, vice-principals and board rooms are finished in a walnut or mahogany flexwood, lending a cool, quiet appearance.

The 15 classrooms, occupying the remainder of this unit, upstairs and down, are the conventional type but with the most efficient specifications planned and carried out in regard to lighting, ventilating, and other essentials.

The wing to the right, extending the length of Citron street, on the east, houses the library in the front and study hall in the rear.

Beautiful Library

The library is finished in an olive green with lacquer red doors and chairs, aluminum stripping, including the mezzanine stair rail and cross-rail, and mahogany book shelves for accent. The entire effect, while more somber than other parts of the building, is almost startling to the visitor in its beauty.

The study hall, a room 51 by 83 feet constructed to be used for social gatherings through the use of removable seats as well as for study hall purposes, is the pride of the laborers for its workmanship. The walls are paneled part way from the floor with soft pinkish-tinted satinwood blocks. The remainder of the finish is white, buff and pink plaster.

It is the ceiling of the study hall which holds most of the charm for the room, however. It is constructed in panels and blocks set at angles to form a pattern with the light and shadows.

The west end of the building comprises the large auditorium, so planned as to be almost perfect as far as acoustics, ventilation and visual qualities are concerned. There

Tattersfields In Visit To Laguna

LAGUNA BEACH, Sept. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. Richard Tattersfield of Minneapolis are visiting in Laguna Beach, being guests of their son, William R. Tattersfield of Bluebird Canyon drive. This is the first California visit in 16 years for Mr. and Mrs. Tattersfield, and they are enjoying to the full their stay which ends this week.

DR. HARRIS' EXPRESSION WAS SO BLAND THAT FOR A MOMENT JUDITH FEARED HE HAD FAILED TO UNDERSTAND SHE REALLY WANTED TO BE RID OF JARVIS.

"Indeed yes," Eden Harris said. "remember Mr. Jarvis perfectly. He held out his hand, and Jarvis accepted it without enthusiasm. 'Personally I've no objection to your company,' the young doctor added. 'But if Miss Howard feels that you should leave, then of course...'"

The other's face clouded unpleasantly. "Are you suggesting, Doctor, that you'd put me out?"

"Oh, not at all," Harris answered. "At least not yet. For the moment I'm merely suggesting that you act the part of a gentleman, and accept Miss Howard's invitation to leave. If you don't do that, then it becomes a rather personal matter between us."

Jarvis said nothing. Slowly he got to his feet and walked toward Eden Harris. Then, without warning, he struck out at him viciously. But the young physician was apparently prepared. With surprising swiftness he blocked Jarvis' wild swing.

"Don't be a fool," he said quietly. "And don't make your presence here any more unpleasant than you have already."

Avoiding Judith's gaze, Francis Jarvis dropped his hands. Then quickly he took up his hat and stick and left the apartment. Harris turned to Judith. "Tell me, what have you been doing since I abandoned you in that restaurant?"

Judith laughed. "Oh, I've been ordering men out of my apartment."

"So I see," she looked down at him affectionately. "Seriously, I've been that—well, that he wanted to see her?"

"I've heard about you and this fellow Jarvis," Steve was saying coldly. "And I understand there's some doctor you've been running around with, too."

For a full half minute Judith was so astonished that she could not answer. Then she said, "Steve, that's too absurd even to comment upon." She paused. "I've seen Jarvis twice. And Dr. Harris three or four times. You know how I got acquainted with them?"

"Of course you'd say that." The remark was like a whip-lash. "I'm not asking you to believe it, Stephen. Because what I do now is none of your affair."

HER swift anger seemed to soften him. "But Judith, I care what you do—doesn't that mean anything to you? Doesn't it mean that I still feel the way I always did?"

"I don't know what it means, Steve. All I know is that we came to the end of things for the two of us."

"But that isn't true," he said quickly. "Judith, I—I've had some luck. It looks now as if I'll be able to do what I wanted all along. Marry you on an income that will let you quit your job."

Judith's intake of breath was sharp and clear, as though someone had tightened a belt at her waist. There it was! Suddenly, unaccountably, here was the thing they had both wanted. But what frightened her, what sent the blood from Judith Howard's face, was not the sudden realization that Stephen Fowler was offering her a marriage that meant a whole new life relieved from office routine. What frightened her was the knowledge that his proposal struck no ecstasy into her being. She liked Steve, yes. Perhaps she still loved him. But something was gone now. Something had been lost, and the fearful thing was that she wasn't sure it could be found again.

"I... I don't know, Stephen. I'll have to think about it."

"Think about it! Why, Judith, we've been thinking about it for four years. We—"

Judith nodded slowly. "I know, Steve. But somehow it's all different now."

At 1 o'clock she left a puzzled Steve; and that night she hurried from the office early, avoiding Virginia. She held to her seclusion into the next day, going to work long before Virginia had come to her door. But at noon, a newspaper in front of her, she found a note from Steve.

"You may as well see this now as later, Judith."

The question startled her. What reason would there be, except

LAGUNA BEACH GIRL SOFTBALL TEAM IN WIN

LAGUNA BEACH, Sept. 7.—The Laguna Lionettes softball team took the measure of the Oceanview girl nine by the score of 23-2, at a runaway game staged on high school diamond Friday night.

For the visitors, good fielding was offset by weakness in the pitching department. The Lionettes clouting the ball almost at will. In the first inning, Laguna marked up 10 runs, this giving a lead hard to overcome.

The line-up—Lionettes, Schockley, ss; Means, 3m; Giddings, p; Deffley, 2b; LaBrow, 1f; Luhrs, 1b; Boyd, c; Booth, cf; Danielson, rf. The Oceanview nine, who play under their given names, were: Joanna, cf; Lillie, 3b; Helen, 1b; Ruby, 1f; Leona, ss; Phyllis, 2b; Dorris, 1f; Minnie, c; Naomi, p. Next Monday, a return game will be played, the Lionettes visiting Oceanview, where, on their home ground, the latter promise a different result.

In observance of Labor day, no games were scheduled for today in the Laguna softball league. William R. Tattersfield is in charge of schedules and assignments of hours of play, working in conjunction with the WPA, Orange county recreational activities, and the Laguna Beach Recreational commission.

Interest in the softball games continues at high pitch, the Lions club and other service organizations having extended financial and personal co-operation.

"IF OUR DEPOSITORS ONLY KNEW!"

Importance of a Tax Conscious Citizenship Stressed by a Leading Official in Banking World, Who Urges That All Should Be Led to Understand the Extent of the Obligations Now Placed Upon Them

BY ORVAL W. ADAMS

Second Vice President of the American Bankers' Association and Executive Vice President of the Utah State National Bank, Salt Lake City

Editor's Note—The following item was called to our attention by a prominent Santa Ana banker. It so clearly explains the condition of banks and the importance of correcting their condition that The Register felt it would be contributing a service to its readers to make it available for them. It matters not whether the reader has a bank account or not. They can do as much to correct the grave conditions the banks and our money are in as a depositor can.

We regard this as news because it is exactly the opposite from what the President says about the soundness of our government bonds. Every one knows that if our government bonds are not sound, our banks are not sound. Current actions of our government that are controversial are matters of news to every voter. It is for this reason we are reproducing it below.

As a sample of the opinion of Mr. Adams, he says: "Complaint is made that in 1929, we were silent when we should have spoken. The danger now is far greater than then." His entire article is worth reading.

Full text of address delivered before the Montana Bankers' Association, at Old Faithful Inn, Yellowstone National Park, July 25:

At the outset I want to make it clear that I am speaking as an individual, and my remarks should not be interpreted as in any way reflecting the policy or viewpoint of the present administration of the American Bankers' Association whose official spokesman is its president, Robert V. Fleming.

I believe that we, as individual bankers, have a responsibility and an obligation to inform our depositors to the best of our ability in regard to money, credit and the elements of sound public finance upon which rests to so great a degree the banking structure and consequently the safety and earning power of the funds entrusted to our care.

Our first duty is to our depositors. Upon this we will all agree. But just what is the extent of this duty? Is our obligation to our depositors fulfilled by merely so managing our banks as in the ordinary course of events to insure the return to them of the moneys deposited by them, or do we not owe a further duty? Are we not charged with the responsibility of doing what we can to make their deposits worth having, to see that they earn something substantial, and to see to it that when repaid they are repaid in dollars of real value?

The depositor is the very backbone of this nation. He is the man who is self-supporting, who saves, who bears the brunt of taxation, who supports the people and the government. Without him life would be primitive indeed. Without him the man on relief would soon find himself in the position of being obliged to rely upon his own efforts for a livelihood. This is so obviously true that one wonders there should be resentment among these classes of the community when a word is said in defense of the depositor, a word which in effect means no more than a warning to these interests not to kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

Deficit No Partisan Issue
Today a word uttered in defense of the depositor is often met with the cry of partisanship, and I am just a bit afraid that in attempting to avoid any feeling of appearance of partisanship we, as bankers, may have unwittingly become partisans in the very worst sense: You cannot avoid partisanship by keeping silent when one party desires that you keep silent. And partisanship in disregard of your duty, to the injury and peril of your depositor, is the worst sort of partisanship.

We cannot be justified in keeping silent when it is our duty to speak, by any plea that we must avoid partisanship. Last May Mr. Roger Babson, in one of his syndicated articles, expressed the point more clearly than I could hope to do. He said: "Our Federal deficit has been considered a partisan issue for the last three years. In this column I purposely avoid discussing controversial political issues. I feel that readers want impartial comments on economic conditions, not any effort at campaign propaganda. I sincerely believe, however, that our Federal deficit has now reached the stage where it is no longer simply a political issue. It has become an economic problem of vital importance to every man, woman and child in this country. Hence, I want to tell you without reservations exactly what I think of this deficit program, and where it is leading us."

Certainly Mr. Babson was right in declaring that, when, what originally may have been but a political issue, becomes an economic problem of vital importance to every man in the country, it can no longer be considered a mere political issue.

Duty as Citizens
I have referred to these remarks of Mr. Babson with the thought in mind of pointing the distinction between partisan conduct on the one hand and neglect of duty to our depositors on the other. It seems to me beyond question that it is our right and duty, both as citizens and as bankers, to express our honest views as to the effect of measures such as the tax on undistributed earnings, such as the Banking Act of 1935, such as the NRA, the AAA, or the FDIC, and as to the effect of the continued policy of unrestrained, undirected, government spending and borrowing. These are not matters merely affecting banks. Indeed, most of them affect banks but incidentally. They are matters of concern to every citizen of the land, and to us as citizens primarily, and but secondarily as bankers.

One other point we should have in mind. It was well expressed by Lewis H. Brown in his address before the Association at New Orleans last November. Mr. Brown said:

"The confidence of business and industry today in our banking system lies largely in the belief that the banks that are open today are operated by trained bankers. Deposit insurance may have some mystic merit in the mind of the average small depositor, but those who understand the problem realize that having banks managed by real bankers is the greatest and best insurance for the safety of depositors' funds."

Credo of Sound Banking
I believe that to fulfill our obligations to our depositors we must do several things:

First: We must manage our own banks. Our depositors are entitled to know in whom is vested the management of the institutions in which they deposit their funds. If we are obliged to surrender the management of our banks in whole or in part to some other person, persons, or agencies, I believe it is our duty to inform our depositors of that fact.

Second: It is our duty to manage our banks in the light of experience, and to the best of our ability, with a view to safeguarding the funds entrusted to us. If we are obliged to abandon practices which in the past have proven necessary to the security of our institutions and our depositors, we should inform our depositors of that fact. Diversification in investments and loans, limitation in the amount of loans, insistence upon the self-liquidating character of loans accepted by us, the preservation of liquidity, all these must be continued, or our depositors be informed that we propose to venture their funds in disregard of some one or more of these principles.

Third: It is our duty to use our best efforts to insure to our depositors a fair return on the funds entrusted to us, and when such a return is rendered increasingly impossible by reason of conditions beyond our immediate control to inform our depositors of such facts that they may intelligently act for their own protection.

Fourth: It is our duty to do everything in our power to make it possible for us to return to our depositors when demanded by them dollars not depreciated by government fiat or by excessive government borrowing. Merely to give back the same number of "counters" would be to fulfill but a legal, not a moral, obligation. When we observe forces beyond our control tending to render impossible the return of sound dollars, about one-ninth of that sum is our duty to inform them of such facts that they may act in their own protection.

Now just what are we doing, and what are our immediate obligations to our depositors? This year the federal government will spend some nine billions of dollars. About one-ninth of that sum will be raised by visible direct taxes, taxes that the man who pays them realize he is paying. Millions of dollars of taxes will fall as an added burden on the depositor, partly in indirect visible taxes, in greater part through present borrowings that will mean taxes in future years; and at least 85 per cent of the total bill will be paid by the poor man and the man of just average means. You might say that 85 per cent of the bill will be paid by the man who is not aware he is going to foot the bill.

Have we done our part in making these facts clear to our depositors? We know the importance of a tax conscious voting citizenship. We know that the politician will do all in his power to prevent the people becoming tax conscious, that he will do this by borrowing instead of paying as we go, by raising revenue through indirect taxes wherever possible instead of through direct taxes.

We know that the continuance of the present spending and borrowing policies of government can lead to but one end, the destruction of the savings of our depositors. It is our duty to do what we can to make the people tax conscious, to show our depositors that visible taxes are but a trifling portion of the real tax burden, to show them not only the extent to which invisible taxes cut into their earnings and their savings, but also to show them how they are further taxed by the low interest policies of government and by competition of banks and Federal bonds.

Banks and Federal Bonds
The depositor as such has refused to purchase government bonds. Does he know that in the past year five out of every six dollars of the new moneys borrowed by the Federal Government have been borrowed from banks?

Banks today hold obligations of the government totaling some three times their aggregate capital. A drop of even ten points in the market of such bonds would wipe out 40 per cent of the capital of the national banks of the country. We know that the present market for bonds of the United States is an artificial market. We know that there could be no sale of the bonds held by us except to other banks. We know that the very occasion requiring a sale of such bonds by us would require a sale of such bonds by other banks. Yet, as a whole, we continue to purchase the obligation of government.

But this is not all. The average depositor relies in part upon the security afforded through insurance of depositors in the FDIC. But does the average depositor know that the corporation, to protect his depositors, holds total assets of some $340,000,000 of which about $20,000,000 consist of bonds of the United States? To put it bluntly, the primary function of the FDIC today is to protect banks against the risk of loss resulting from depreciation in bonds of the United States, and this it accomplishes through the ownership of such bonds itself.

Does the average depositor realize that apart from such assets the FDIC has but the banks to rely upon for the security of their annual assessments, and that today ability to pay such assessments rests primarily upon the continuance of the present high market for bonds of the United States?

Effect on Interest Rates

Have we made it clear to our depositors that the reduction of more than one-half in the returns paid on their deposits has necessarily and directly resulted from the low interest policies of government, together with the fact that government is today the chief customer for the accumulated funds of our depositors?

Does the average depositor realize that the Government has become the banker's main customer as a result of the accumulated effects of the experimental policies of the Administration, of continued threats to industry, and of the consequent destruction of confidence in the future?

Does the average depositor understand that continued borrowing and continued unbalanced budgets lead to the one inevitable end of uncontrollable inflation? Do our depositors understand that they are the creditors and the banks the debtors? Do they understand that continued borrowing and continued unbalanced budgets lead to the one inevitable end of uncontrollable inflation? Do our depositors understand that they are the creditors and the banks the debtors?

Do they understand that when the Government reduces its own debts by inflating the currency, it also reduces the debts of the banks to the depositors, renders impossible the return by the banks to the depositors of such dollars as were entrusted by the depositors to the banks, destroys not only the earning value of the depositors but destroys also in large part the principal of the deposits? Do our depositors understand that the seemingly plump and wholesome condition of the banks does not reflect health but bloat; that excess reserves represent in principal part of the purchase of the obligations of government and the credits created in favor of government upon such purchases?

They do not, and it is our duty to endeavor to the best of our ability, to make these facts clear to them.

What FDIC Insurance Means

Does the average depositor understand that by insuring deposits in the FDIC, what the government has really done is tantamount to insuring itself against threatened lack of funds, to discourage the depositors of America from resorting to the old practice of hiding their savings in a wool sock, to coax out this money from its hiding place and bring it into the vaults of the bank where it can be made easily accessible to the federal government? The FDIC cannot insure against loss of earnings through unavoidable reductions in interest rates, nor against loss of principal through inflation.

Does the average depositor realize that with increased centralization of power has come a loss of the proper sense of responsibility for spending the moneys of the people; that history is repeating itself and a group securing control of a one time democracy are entrenching themselves in power by subsidizing a portion of the electorate?

Does the average depositor realize that the administration is steadily engaged in making permanent that which was originated to meet a temporary emergency, and that instead of reducing expenses or balancing budgets or encouraging a revival of industry, further and greater charges are placed upon industry?

The action of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in reducing interest rates, following within a day or two by the action of the Federal Reserve Board in increasing reserve requirements, tells the story of the determination of the administration to prevent any return to normal channels of financing industry; its determination to preserve for the use of government the resources of the commercial banks; to prevent such resources from finding another market.

Old Rules Still Sound

Does the average depositor realize what burdens upon him, both direct and indirect, lie in the Social Security Act, the cost of which may well exceed the entire tax burden imposed upon the people of this country but a generation ago?

In years past we have been considered as business leaders and advisors in our several communities. Our judgment has been sought. It has been assumed that we owed a duty to our depositors to advise with them respecting matters supposed to be more within our knowledge than with the knowledge of the average business man. If such a duty was ever owed, then today it is in peculiar sense imposed upon us by reason of the present condition of affairs in this country. We cannot justify ourselves in neglecting this duty by any plea that to so act would subject us to a charge of partisanship.

As bankers we recognize that there are certain basic truths that have withstood all the fiery heat of experience; that they are free of all gross; that they persist. As bankers, we have learned that certain fiscal policies are inherently sound or unsound, constructive or destructive, irrespective of who may advocate or who may oppose them, no matter how intense public clamor may be for or against them.

We know that fundamental principles in all realms of activity—physical, spiritual, mental, moral and economic—cannot be abrogated or even suspended by the whims or edicts of men, no more than we can stay the operation of the laws of gravitation.

As bankers, we are not concerned in partisan issues. It matters not to us by what party results are accomplished, but it does matter to us that sound principles be applied in government.

Do we not know that the escape from which has been the boast of English speaking peoples, and particularly of Americans, is the money that was placed with us for safety and sound investment by the wage earners, the professional men, the clerks, the widows, the domestics, the farmers, and all others who live within their means and save?

Why don't we tell them that the federal government came direct to us and got the money and got it upon the government's own terms? Why don't we remind them that it wasn't the bankers' money but the people's money? Why don't we explain to them our reasons for making such loans?

In the past we invested in government bonds because we had been accustomed to think of such bonds as the safest of investments. Today we cannot explain our continued investment in such bonds upon any such ground. The explanation is rather to be found in the fact that in common with every other line of business the banks suffering from a world-wide depression were relieved through the aid of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; that thereafter that corporation became the principal stockholder in some 6000 banks; that because of policies of the administration the ordinary markets for our funds have been lost to us, and that the government is today our chief customer.

Need of Balanced Budget
You need not be told the private enterprise cannot compete with tax supported governmental agencies; that the existence of such agencies restricts the field for private enterprise; that you cannot loan money in competition with government.

Likewise, you need not be told that business cannot function without a knowledge of costs and market. Today business is without such knowledge. It cannot anticipate what is going to happen, what field will be left to it, what its costs will be directly in the conduct of its business, and indirectly in the proportion of the expenses of government to be saddled upon it.

That is why businessmen of experience and ability hesitate to borrow, and in fact, refuse to borrow money. There is no incentive for them to increase their obligations. They hesitate to add to their responsibilities. In the aggregate, they are marking time, waiting to see what is going to happen. We certainly know today, as we never knew before, that there is such a relation between government and business, that only under a sound government can business prosper.

We know today that only under a balanced budget for government lies the possibility of a true restoration of business. But do our depositors appreciate this? Can we help them to a correct understanding of this basic truth?

Sees Inflation Here

Wrong thinking leads inevitably to harm. The administration is given to pointing with pride to the increase in bank deposits which has totaled nearly 50 billions of dollars. Is it not our simple duty to explain that such increases mean little but bank credit inflation, the effect of which it is difficult to distinguish from paper currency inflation? Both represent merely the credits to government on the purchase of U. S. of government bonds.

Substantially by the amount of such increased deposits credit has increased over normal business demand, and therefore inflation has occurred. I have referred to the purchase of government bonds by banks, and to the holding of such bonds by the FDIC. A further fact should be noted as reflecting the misuse of instrumentalities intended to serve the purposes of industry: Over the total bills and securities now owned by the 12 federal reserve banks, more than 98 per cent consist of obligations of the federal government. In 1926 this percentage was approximately 27.

Does the depositor realize that he represents the creditor class of this country, that in the aggregate the small holdings make the large total; that for all practical purposes the wealthy men may be ignored when we are considering the effects of the policies of government? Does the average depositor realize that when the government reduces its debts by inflation it also reduces our debts to him, and the debts of the insurance company to him, and to that extent destroys the worth of his savings?

With the banks stuffed with the obligations of government, with their operations fortified by the resources of the federal reserve banks, which in turn are likewise loaded with such obligations, with their deposits insured by the FDIC, the amount of which consists almost entirely of obligations of the government, is not the situation one which should be brought to the knowledge of the man who must foot the bill? Can we justify, can we even excuse, ourselves for delaying longer in using every faculty and every power at our command to bring these facts to the knowledge of our depositors? To my mind there can be but one answer.

The "Planned Economy"
Fundamentally, this country is sound. Our troubles are self-made. We are simply off balance. We are ignoring the balances set up by the Constitution. We are ignoring the balance that comes from free inter-play of the ideas and independent action in business. We are substituting for all this the ideas of a small group of men to whom are entrusted the powers heretofore exercised by the many.

This is what is called "planned economy," perhaps the oldest thing in government, and the escape from which has been the boast of English speaking peoples, and particularly of Americans.

Those in authority in government assume today that a part is greater than the whole, that some few men can better direct the affairs of the whole people than can the whole people. They assume that the lessons of history are meaningless or else misleading. They are convinced that initiative is vicious, except when exhibited by an elected officer or an appointed bureaucrat.

They affirm day by day that the very idea of local self-government, whether in public or private affairs was wrong. They affirm that organization should be from the top down and not from the bottom up. They believe that nothing can be too big or too powerful provided it can be conceived and controlled by the federal government, but the otherwise size is vicious, growth must be prevented.

Today they are trying to do two things. They are trying to restore industry, to get business functioning normally and employing the usual percentage of the people, and at the same time they are trying to bring about what they call reforms.

They are demanding that business exhibit confidence in the future, assume obligations, employ more men, and so "revive" the federal government. At the same time they are adding day by day to the numbers on the public pay roll, wrapping more and more red tape about industry, demanding more and more that it be guided not by trained management, but by public officials. They pile tax upon tax and marvel that industry does not recover.

The Lesson of History
Experience taught our ancestors that responsibilities lessened with distance, and that you got more for your dollar if you knew the man who was spending it, and if he knew you were watching him spend it.

Experience demonstrated that in private life, too great a concentration of power was dangerous to individual freedom of action, and consequently there were enacted laws imposing necessary regulations and restrictions upon large aggregations of capital.

Now, let us stop and consider a minute where we were back in those "horse and buggy days"—those days when we were content to believe that we had not suddenly been endowed with supreme wisdom, unknown to our ancestors, or even to ourselves a week before, but when we still supposed that, like other animals, we were creatures with a long history behind us of steady growth and development, and that in that history were to be found the basic rules of conduct, when we believed that such rules might be improved upon, and when we steadily endeavored, with the use of all the brain of all the people, to improve them, but before it had occurred to us that we could advance by scrapping everything that had been learned in the history of the race; where, in other words, we were before we were suddenly blessed with supreme wisdom derived not from experience, but from misguided, impractical theorists.

So far back as history records, those in control of government credited themselves with a superior wisdom and endeavored to regulate the affairs of the people. The further back you go in history the greater this control, the greater "planned economy."

The history of the English speaking peoples is the story of the fight to escape from this control and to render impossible its recurrence, to permit the individual the fullest possible freedom of action to develop himself. Experience taught our ancestors that you could not have this independence if you had too great a concentration of powers in government. That is what brought about the division of the powers of government between the executive, legislative and judicial. That is what brought about the separation of church and state.

Origin of Our Government
Experience also taught our ancestors that effective organization, organization which served the people and which did not dominate the people had to come from the bottom up and not from the top down. That is what established our local governments, our state governments and our federal government. The federal government did not set up the states, the counties, the cities, the towns; on the contrary, the people established these units, restricting and limiting the powers entrusted to them as they progressed, from the smaller to the largest, and leaving to the latter, or believing that they had left to the latter, only those matters of true national concern.

Now, whatever we may think of all this, we cannot avoid recognizing that it worked better than any planned economy ever worked. It brought about a standard of living higher than had ever been known upon this earth before. It made possible to the common man comforts of life unknown to the rulers of kingdoms of but a few generations ago. If we are to abandon this and to assume that progress is to be found only by discarding the fruits of experience, let us at least do so knowingly, and let us not be fooled in what we are doing; and let us talk it over with our depositors. Do not leave them to hear but one side of the story.

If banking is to become a government monopoly let it be because we have determined that that is best for the country. Do not let it happen because we shut our eyes to the successive steps taken by certain men in the government to bring about this result. Let us clearly recognize that just as state rights are being destroyed by encroachment by the federal government, by what amounts of coercion and by unjustified gratuities, just so are the foundations of independent banking being sapped by the suggestions of encroachment of government upon the functions of the banker and the increasing control by the federal government of the operations of the banks.

When A Borrower Dictates
Let us not forget that when the borrower dictates the policies of the lender the business of the lender will be conducted in the interest of the borrower and not in the interest of the lender.

Let us not subject ourselves to the just criticism of our stockholders, our depositors, and the public, by ignoring the rules which the past has demonstrated to be essential to the safeguarding of the moneys entrusted to us. Do any of us believe that there is no longer a need for diversification in our investments; that we can safely lend to one borrower to the very limit of our resources? Do we not all know that the limitation on loans to one borrower was not made applicable to government simply because experience had taught the necessity of so applying such limitations?

Let us not forget that to the extent that government uses its credit to establish institutions competitive with banks it weakens its capacity to afford relief in an emergency, and that to the extent of such competition in normal times banks are reduced in their capacity to carry on. Competition of government with business in normal times necessarily weakens private industry, and likewise reduces the capacity of government to afford relief in abnormal times. This is one of the penalties for permanent intrusion of government into business.

Tax Conscious Votes

We must recognize that our depositors do not understand nor rely upon the set-up of the FDIC to protect their deposits. Their reliance is upon our management, and upon the credit of government, and the belief that government is back of the banks in insuring their deposits. As government credit is weakened, just so will this confidence be weakened, and just in proportion to our holdings of government bonds will our capacity to meet the demands of our depositors upon us be weakened.

We know the importance of a tax conscious voting citizenship. We know that if our depositors understand the extent of the obligations being foisted upon them, they would rise in their might and in their numbers demand that an end be put to the continued borrowings of government.

We know that by continuing to purchase government bonds we are destroying the worth of the savings of our depositors. We know that the continuance of the present policies of government can lead to but one end. We know that they are not restoring real life to industry, but are merely giving temporary relief at the cost of permanent injury. We know that the money spent today to bring about the appearance of prosperity is a charge upon the future.

We know that the continued accession of power to the federal government must lead ultimately to the destruction of the constitutional rights under which private initiative has had a field of action. We know that it is not too late to act. The power to shape our course, to put an end to the evils that beset us, still lies with the depositors of America. They are our finest citizens and constitute the strength and backbone of our country. Give them the facts, and you may trust to the soundness of their heads and hearts.

Opportunity for unusual service comes only in great crises. Leadership at such times calls for both wisdom and courage. Not our life time has there been such opportunity for service by bankers as now exists. The danger is grave and imminent, yet the people can be trusted to act rightly for their own interests if we give them the facts.

Complaint is made that in 1929 we were silent when we should have spoken. The danger now is far greater than then. Let us not make it possible for history to record that in this supreme hour the bankers of America, out of silence induced by fear, failed both their depositors and their country. When the future of the nation and the welfare of its people are involved mere party politics sink into insignificance. The issue is no longer one of mere partisanship, but of simple honesty and genuine patriotism.

We know the importance of a tax conscious voting citizenship. We know that if our depositors understand the extent of the obligations being foisted upon them, they would rise in their might and in their numbers demand that an

LIVING COSTS AT UNIVERSITY FAVOR WORKER

The student who is willing to work should have no difficulty in making his or her way through the University of California, according to Merton E. Hill, director of admissions on the Berkeley and Los Angeles campuses of the University, in a communication to the local Extension Service.

One of the most common questions asked by the prospective student, says Mr. Hill, is "How much it will cost me per year if I attend the University?" By referring to compiled statistics, the director of admissions is now able to answer that question.

Itemized statements of expenses have been received from 930 students and the average cost per year at the University has been found to be $445. This figure is $250 per year greater on the average than the cost of attending a junior college.

However, when information received from junior college transfers on the campus during the academic year 1935-36 was studied, it showed that 68 per cent were earning all or nearly all of their expenses. The average amount earned per year was $219, or only six dollars less than the difference between the average cost of attending the University and that of attending a junior college.

Perfumers buy ambergris at an average price of $250 a pound. One recorded find weighed 248 pounds.

CITY CARETAKER AT ORANGE WAS EVANGELIST WHEN A BOY

By MARAH ADAMS

He married his first couple when he was 15 years old, a boy evangelist back in Burnett county, Texas, and he has joined in matrimony thousands — of young people, — middle aged and quite elderly ones since that eventful day.

Quite as a matter of course and as an ordained minister of the gospel, the quiet man who may be trimming the vine which covers the Orange city hall, clipping the hedges or cutting the lawn, may make arrangements to unite two persons in marriage at the close of a busy day as caretaker of the municipal building and grounds.

He is Alex C. McShane, a member and preacher in the Church of Christ. He lives at 344 North Lemon street, Orange. He began preaching at the age of 14 and has conducted many evangelistic meetings throughout Kansas, Arkansas and Oklahoma. He recalls a meeting in the southwest where 188 converts were baptized at one time. People are not greatly interested in religion any more, says the minister and caretaker, there are so many other things they would rather think about.

People are not so interested in marriage either, he mused, and it's a problem nowadays to marry and "live happily ever after." Financial difficulties have such a disconcerting way of not only coming in at the door but of sitting down and making themselves thoroughly at home and even if love does not fly out at the window, he usually sulks around in the corners.

Two brilliant yellow butterflies flutter across the vivid green lawn at the Orange city hall, pink oleanders nod on slender stems. "Religion is found in all beautiful things of nature," says Mr. McShane, when it is in the heart of the observer.

COLLEGE GIVES TUSTIN YOUTH SIGNAL HONOR

Signal honors were accorded a Tustin young man this week when James Parker Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Wilson, of Panorama Heights, received notice that he had been awarded a scholarship at the American University at Washington, D. C.

Following graduation in 1932 from Tustin Union high school, he attended Pomona college where he was a member of the 1936 graduating class. His interests have always been along city management and government service and he hopes some day to enter diplomatic service. His studies in the eastern university will continue along these same lines as he studied at Pomona.

The young man plans to leave about September 12 for Washington. He has been employed this summer in Laguna Beach.

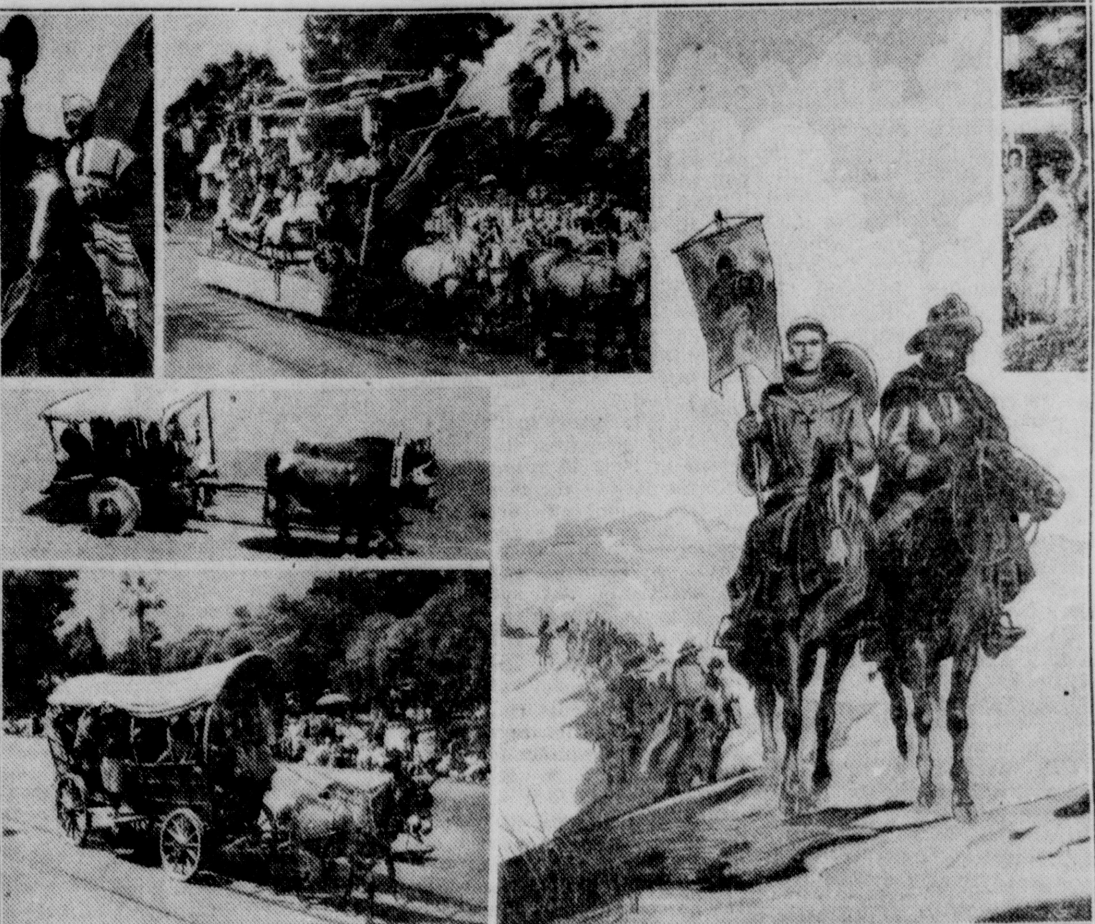

His brother, Stanley Wilson, enrolled recently at the University of California, Berkeley, where he is majoring in journalism. Their father is president of the Tustin Farm Center.

The ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Weber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Weber, 1908 South Sycamore street, and Mr. Klingenberg was a quiet event of Friday evening, September 4, in the home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Klingenberg, 702 South Sycamore street.

Barbecue Precedes Visitor's Eastern Departure

Preceding her departure late last week for her home in Minneapolis, Minn., after a six weeks' stay in this city, Miss Geraldine Sheehan was complimented at a barbecue which had its setting at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry D. Edwards, 2512 North Park boulevard.

An intimate group of relatives and friends was brought together for the pleasant occasion. Mr. Edwards' brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Edwards of Hollywood, were among those sharing the affair. Ivan Edwards, a well known singer, is a former resident of this city, returning here quite frequently to visit, as well as to appear in musical programs.

Others in the party were Mr. and Mrs. George Pilon and son, George Jr., Los Angeles; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Briggs, Hollywood; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Winchester, Mr. and Mrs. Harry D. Edwards and Mrs. Edwards' mother, Mrs. Ellen Croddy, all of this city, with Miss Sheehan, the honoree.

COAST DEFENSE GETS NEW GUNS

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—The Pacific Coast's defense soon is to be augmented by the installation of four new 16-inch guns, according to announcement of Major Gen. George S. Simonds, new commander of the 9th Corps Area.

With a range of nearly 30 miles at sea, the new guns always will have the job—if they ever have one—of firing at invisible targets. Just as a matter of practice, it is expected that the gun crews will be given precisely that opportunity by shooting at invisible targets at that distance.

Installation of the massive pieces of ordnance will give San Francisco the ultimate in protection from invasion by a foreign fleet.

Guns, stationed beside the huge guns—called 16-inch rifles in army parlance—can bombard enemy ships with projectiles weighing more than a ton while the vessels are far beyond the range of vision of observers on the coast.

The guns were built as part of the army's policy of expanding fighting units and stiffening coast defenses, approved by the last congress.

While 80 or 90 men will be used to fire each gun, double that number is needed for range-finding and other details of firing at an unseen target. In time of war, army officials state, 200 men would be assigned to each gun.

The huge concrete and steel gun carriages or bases will be set up north and south of the Golden Gate. Two will be erected at Fort Funston and two at Tennessee Point in Marin county, on the opposite of the Golden Gate from San Francisco.

The guns measure 66 2-3 feet in length. They recently were completed at one of the navy arsenals and were checked and fired at the Aberdeen proving grounds at Aberdeen, Wash.

Work on preparing the concrete bases for the guns has begun.

Brain Twizzlers

By Prof. J. D. Flint

An interesting problem came up in connection with a gay house party at a popular summer resort. A number of college boys and girls had planned a week-end party at the summer home of one of the group. At the last minute several were unable to go for one reason or another.

It was found that when the young people paired off—a boy and a girl—there were four girls left without escorts but when they divided into groups of three—two girls and a boy—there was one boy left.

How many girls and how many boys were at the party?

If all the outlying possessions of the United States, exclusive of Alaska, could be combined into a single area, they would total less than Montana's area.

Quins' Work Is Never Done—Labor Day's No Exception

Overalled and Rosy-Cheeked, They Get Holiday Fun From Everyday 'Chores'—and Love It!

Labor Day seems to mean just that to the Dionnes. And, like other busy workmen, the quins must occasionally take time out. In the shade Annette lines up behind Emilie for her cold drink, while Yvonne, below, sits down on the job. Cecile seems perturbed, perhaps because she hadn't thought of it first.

There are labor difficulties at Callander, it appears. While Marie and Yvonne sharpen their appetites with setting-up exercises, Cecile and Emilie, at left, and Annette, right, apparently await their noon lunch. A few moments later, and all the tiny laborers—Annette, Marie, Yvonne, Emilie, and Cecile—appear concerned about the delayed viands. Maybe that bottom scene portrays a sitdown strike in protest, except that Cecile, Emilie, Annette, Marie and Yvonne seem to be having fun.

All work and no play will never make the quintuplets dull girls, because they know how to mix business with pleasure, the old saying to the contrary. A happy smile, framed in tousled curls, reveals that Yvonne finds just as much enjoyment in her work as does Annette, shown contentedly putting in her garden.

Today's Guest Editorial

By

Franklyn E. Smith, Secretary-Manager, Orange County Builders' Exchange.

The "Guest Editor" selects his own subject matter and it may or may not agree with the opinions of the publisher. The Register will invite and publish from time to time a "guest editorial" by some prominent, practical Orange county citizen.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING URGED

One of the most serious situations the construction industry has had to face is at hand, that of interesting and training young men in the mechanical lines of this industry. The seriousness of the situation will become manifest to us when we stop to consider that for years we have been draining our skilled labor and have failed to replace it. Let us consider one instance: In the city of Louisville, Kentucky, the average age of union bricklayers is fifty years, a condition which is reflected in other trades, and without question in every state in the Union. How is a situation such as this to be remedied? I think there is but one solution: a system of vocational training in our public schools where young men may be given the opportunity of learning a useful trade. An official of our public school system readily conceded to me that for sometime past too much emphasis has been placed by school authorities on academic training. I by no means discourage the need of academic training but I do believe that every year thousands of boys are graduated from our public schools with absolutely no definite program formulated for their life work.

Many boys have certain ambitions in the business world, salesmen, managers, executives, etc. Are these ambitions attained through a clerical position? Very seldom. The successful salesman is the one who knows his product, the successful manager, the one who can impart true knowledge of his product and thereby command the respect of his subordinates, the successful executive, the one who through thorough knowledge of the production of his product can successfully combat competition and efficiently promote the manufacture of his product. The majority of our "big men" in business today are those who, in addition to their academic training, were active in the mechanical production of their product. Therefore I feel, whether a boy choose a trade or an industrial career he can only attain success by first acquiring definite knowledge of a product through having taken an active part in the actual construction thereof.

Thousands of high school boys are mechanically inclined and are at an impressionable age where their interests can be moulded into a concrete form of endeavor. Why not give them a chance? Our very lives and the life of a nation depends upon production. Can we continue to forge ahead if the proportion of non-producing, so called, white collar worker continues to transcend that of the skilled mechanic?

A great number of boys walking the streets and roaming the country today are there because of lack of opportunity to complete their mechanical inclinations. Skilled mechanics in the building industry are at a premium and will be for some years to come. A course in our public schools in technical training for the building industry plus a month's practical training during the summer vacation will fit boys for a position when they are ready to start in their chosen trade.

The construction industry is the backbone of finance, the indispensable prime mover in the basic industries, the direct employer of more than three million trained workers. I believe that if we can bring to the young men the possibilities and future of a trade, we have at least made a start in eliminating the unemployment and undecided state of mind in youths from 18 to 24 years of age, the age when most young men are called upon to make a decision regarding their life work.

OUT OF THE WORKERS' PAY

The Democratic National committee, which is furnishing copy for The Register's Presidential Battle page, in Thursday's issue seems to take exception at Governor Landon's calling the 1936 Tax act as being cockeyed.

Governor Landon says, "the 1936 Revenue act was the most cockeyed piece of tax legislation ever imposed in a modern country."

The Democratic committee said, by inference, that Landon, by opposing this tax on undistributed surpluses, would work a hardship on the poor. This philosophy of the Democratic committee of selling envy and hate has wrecked many a nation. It only creates distrust and hatred against the owners of capital who are furnishing labor with an opportunity to earn a much higher living than they would be able to earn without efficient tools (capital). The Democratic committee would lead the voters to believe that the government can consume the seed corn—capital—of the country and still make it possible for the workers to earn good wages.

The whole question resolves itself around the cruel illusion that the demagogues have been so able to sell to the great mass of workers—voters—that they could make the rich pay the taxes and that taxes did not eventually come out of the payrolls and dinner pails of the workers.

The facts are that if the aggregate net income of all individuals having an income of $5000 a year in 1933 were added to the aggregate net income of all corporations and were confiscated and used for government expense, these combined amounts would still fall short of meeting the 1936 cost of the government by $1,200,000,000. This, of course, would be taking a large amount of income from people having an income of less than $5,000 a year because there are 24,000,000 registered security holders, many of whose income, of course, would be much less than $5,000 and this would be confiscated, if the profits of all corporations were confiscated.

It is, therefore, plain that the Democratic committee is simply trying to make the average worker believe that capital can be confiscated by taxation without reducing the standard of living of the workers. This is in violation of all records of history. There never has been an exception that the destruction of capital by the government in maintaining waste and inefficiency has not resulted in lowering the standard of the workers in every succeeding year. It is true that the workers can live better the year the seed corn, or the capital, is consumed but it is just as plain that the farmer cannot eat his seed corn and at the same time employ labor to plant, cultivate and care for the crops, that were not planted, because the seed corn was eaten.

It is also true that each succeeding year, they will have less and less corn to use just as the standard of living of all the workers is, of necessity, lowered each succeeding year by the cruel illusion that capital can be wasted by the government and, at the same time, be sure to raise the standard of living of the workers each succeeding year.

LABOR

"The happiness of men consists in life. And life is in labor."—Tolstoy.

We pause today in celebration of labor. We realize that we are enjoying the blessings of civilization because of the labor of the past and of the present. We cannot pay too much tribute to the man who labors and accomplishes and the more he accomplishes by his labors, the more he is able to benefit society. The principal benefit comes, however, not by laboring alone and appropriating all of the fruits of labor for immediate consumption. The fruits of labor, when properly used, greatly adds to the productivity of future labor, thus greatly enriching the lives of all.

With millions of men unable to secure employment at wages in proportion to what they produce, our country should seriously study, during this Labor day, the causes which bring about this condition. It should be the aim of every good citizen and the government to bring about a public opinion that will permit every citizen to secure an opportunity of gainful employment at wages commensurate with his production. If we get some insight into this difficulty, the day set aside in commemoration of labor will be well spent.

DANGER IN MONEY AND BANKS

When prominent people have diametrically opposite opinions on current problems facing the public, these current different opinions become of great public interest.

It is with this in mind that The Register is reproducing, on another page of this issue, an address made by Orval W. Adams, vice president of the American Bankers' association and second vice president of the Utah State National bank at Salt Lake City, which was made before the Montana Bankers' association at Yellowstone National park.

On Friday, from the rear platform of his train, President Roosevelt said, "I might add that the obligations of the government of the United States are on a sounder basis of credit than ever before in all history." If that is true, it is fine. If it is not true, it is very serious.

In Mr. Adams' address, he explains why he thinks the bankers have a solemn obligation to their depositors and to the citizens of our country to explain the actual condition of the banks. In his address, he said: "Not in our life time has there been such opportunity for service by bankers as now exists. The danger is grave and imminent, yet the people can be trusted to act rightly in their own interests if we give them the facts."

"Complaint is made that in 1929, we were silent when we should have spoken. THE DANGER IS FAR GREATER NOW THAN THEN. Let us not make it possible for history to record that in this hour the bankers of America failed both their depositors and their country. When the future of the nation and the welfare of its people are involved, mere party politics sinks into insignificance. The issue is no longer one of mere partisanship, but of simple, honest and genuine patriotism."

The Register believes that with statements being made like these, by men who have made a life study of banking, that this address becomes of prominent importance to our readers. It is suggested that if you do not have time to read the article in full that the paper be laid away until you do. It is a subject that is important to every citizen, whether they have a deposit in any bank or whether they do not. The Register is reproducing it as a small contribution to adult education.

WEALTH IN THREE PLANTING

Planting of the 20,000,000 tree seedlings distributed to farmers for woodland and shelter-belt purposes in 40 states in 1935, makes the whole country richer, today and in the future.

This seedling distribution is carried out through the Federal Forest Service by federal-state co-operation, and has nothing to do with plantings in state or privately owned timberlands.

They are trees furnished farmers at cost to plant in windbreaks along his farmyard, to reinforce his farm woodlot, or to anchor his soil against wind or water erosion.

Then, for 100 years or more, these trees will work for all of us, holding the soil firm, raising the water table, providing grateful shade, and at last falling to serve men as lumber or fuel.

The Gas That Runs The Machine

Little Benny's
Note Book

BY LEE PAPE

Me and Shorty Judge was taking a walk just taking a walk, and we started to go passed some kid in a green cap and a green sweater, me saying, Hay kid, why don't you get something green for a change?

Being a kind of a short kid with glasses and a torn up nose, and he said, Is that so, who says so, do you want a fite Come on, put up or shut up, he said.

Proving you never can tell how tuff a kid is from his size, and Shorty Judge said, Go on and fite him, Benny, you can lick him easy, look at the size of him.

Sure, I'm a sitch to lick, come on and stop waisting time, the kid said.

And he made fists and started jumping around as if his size was properly all muscle, and I said, I fite guys bigger than me, not smaller, go on and fite him or he'll grew up a little, and be sides you've got glasses on, I don't hit any size people with glasses.

Well G. Benny, he can take his glasses off, and he offered to fite first, so it's his own fault if he's smaller, go on and it him or he'll think you're scared of him, Shorty Judge said, and I said, Why don't you go ahead and fite him your self if you're anxious to see a fite?

He's bigger than I am, Shorty said, and the kid, said, I am not, come on and measure.

I can see with my naked eyes, Shorty said, and the kid said, Then I'll get my brother and he'll fite you both at the same time with one hand behind his back, that's fair enough.

And he ran in the house, yelling, Hay Mike, hay Mike, and Shorty said, Come on, let's go.

Why, what's a hurry, you wanted a fite, didn't you? I said.

Saying it kind of nerviss, and Shorty said, Well I'm going whether you do or not.

Wich he started to, me going after him trying to look slow and move fast.

PUEBLO, Colo., Sept. 7.—This might well be called the boom-doggie capital of America. For here have been perpetrated in the name of "relief" some of the most fantastic operations with federal money that have been recorded anywhere. Pueblo county has received about $233,096 of federal money for local projects.

First, there's a golf course. The WPA spent $100,826 on it. In constructing it, a ditch 4200 feet long was dug and filled up when it was discovered that the ditch was in the wrong place for draining. A second ditch was dug and parts of it were too long and had to be filled in.

Second, there's the expenditure of about $310,370 on improvements to the state fair grounds. The fair grounds are idle most of the year, but they do take in some money as a business proposition for the state, and Colorado should have defrayed much more of the cost instead of leaving the bulk of it to taxpayers in other parts of the country—this is the chief objection raised even among Colorado citizens, who feel that the cost of maintenance will ultimately be a burden upon them.

About $250,000 was spent on horse barns. There are 10 units each, costing about $23,597. Commenting on these barns, the New York Sun, which has made a specialty of exposing these boondoggles, remarks: "Even the most aristocratic of horses, when ushered into such a barn, ought not to look the WPA in the mouth, but the question which doubtless rises in the minds of many Coloradans is: How is the state to produce enough horses to fill all these barns unless there is an immediate return to the horse-and-buggy days?"

Third, there is comment on the outlay of $50,000 of federal money to improve streets and driveways leading to the state fair grounds, when, at a town not far away, the president approved a similar improvement of 12 miles of streets at a total cost of only $2500.

Fourth, there is the roof and extension of the poultry building, authorized by the president through the WPA at a cost to the federal treasury of $24,900.

Fifth, federal money is already being used for maintenance purposes. Thus, seven large and 127 small bridges are being painted by the WPA at a total cost of $37,000.

Sixth, a zoo costing $24,595 of federal money is being constructed in the city park.

Seventh, another $24,595 has been borrowed to landscape a hill in the animal pens. This is also federal money.

Eighth, the young people of Pueblo are to have their dancing pavilion in the city park remodeled. It will cost $24,750 of federal money.

Ninth, wading pools are being constructed by the WPA at a cost of $24,800 to the federal treasury. Pueblo county has 1506 persons who pay income taxes to the federal government, and, since the average was $60 for the state, the assumption is that about $90,000 will be paid by Pueblo county residents toward repayment to the association also filed articles of incorporation with a capital stock of $10,000, all but $1000 of which has been subscribed.

Modern Life

ON GOING BACK TO SCHOOL

Soon the nation will be going back to school, and once again we find ourselves asking what it is all about.

Why do we go back to school? What does it mean to be an educated man?

As the executive head of a great university, each autumn I find myself asking again what the purpose of university training really is. I am sure, for myself, that the main purpose of university training is not the production of technical experts.

It is futile to expect a university to furnish its students with all the technical knowledge they will need in the execution of their professional duties as they go from school to work.

Even such schools as journalism, business, and engineers make a grave mistake when they spend too much time on the purely technical aspects of these professions.

I agree with the British scholar who said recently that the technical details can best be mastered in practical experience.

"The function of the universities in training scientific workers and technical men for industry," this scholar goes on to say, "is rather to give them such a knowledge of the principles of science and technology that they are able to bring trained minds to bear upon the understanding of practical problems which they encounter in their industrial or professional life."

To stimulate thought!

To widen horizons!

To develop the faculty of judgment!

These are the major objectives of university training. By these gifts, men may more surely sort out the real issues from the bogus and have a sounder sense of the values involved.

OUR CHILDREN

BY ANGELO PATRI

TAKING A STAND

One of the teachers I remember with deepest gratitude and affection is the man who used to tell us that the one duty of our lives was "to take a stand." He had no patience with the student who refused to take sides, and less with him who, compelled to take his side, could not be forced into fighting for it. "Life," he thundered, "is a struggle between good and evil, two ideas. Choose your side and fight for it or do not say you are living."

I am passing along General Webb's word in the hope that some of the boys and girls will heed it and take their stand according to their choice. It is sad to see young people of college age without opinions, without convictions, and without an urge to have them much less to defend them. These young people are not alive. They walk about in a world that is a battlefield of ideas, and never so much as glance to right or left.

"O, why bother? What have we got to say anyway? Who'd listen to us? They do what they like. Anyway I don't know what they're talking about. You can't believe the newspapers. I'm not going to have a headache about it. Only gets you into trouble anyway."

That attitude is costly both to the young person and to his community. He and his kind are going to be voters and very soon be in control of affairs. And they know little or nothing about them. They are not even interested. Their games, dances, date, and a dim hope of a job sometime at something, about fill their vague consciousness.

We have not done enough to encourage boys and girls to take a deep interest in what is going on. We have not taught them to choose their side and defend it, argue it out, change their minds and begin again, so learning how to live. Their crude opinions worry us, their noisy debates annoy us, their desire to parade and shout and wave flags frighten us. We put a premium on their silence and praise them when they sleep.

It is time we showed them that they must learn how to live by selecting their cause and defending it by speech and action. I would not expect school children and college youths to usurp authority, lay down laws for their leaders. Why should they? What they want is the challenge of responsibility, to be asked to study the world of today, choose their idea and see it clearly. Discussion is the way to clarity. I have seen mature men start out with one idea and end their discussion by accepting quite the opposite one. The main thing is to be alive to ideas, to stand for something, to know what one is standing for and why. Youth is not static. It will develop into activity and because the tendency is always toward good, it can be trusted far more than it has been in the past. In a day when the world is seething with ideas and dangers I much prefer to hear a group of young people wrangling over Hitler and Mussolini, Great Britain and France, war and peace, labor and capital, strike and anti-strike, than to hear them talking about dates and movie actresses, scores and hits and who's who in baseball. They are American citizens and they should be struggling to see they way clear to serve the best interests of their country in their time. Who is helping them toward this? What forces are at work to guide them in taking their stand?

Mr. Patri has prepared a leaflet entitled, "Convalescent Children," in which he tells parents how to help such children to entertain themselves without fatigue.
